Legal Report Backs HOLC In Setting Up Group Health

Affiliation of Four More U. S. Units Approved by Clinic Heads.

'Diversion' of Fund Assailed in House

Legislative Council Says Agency Had Right to Allot $40,000.

Legality of the financial set-up of Group Health Association, Inc., was upheld yesterday on Capitol Hill, simultaneously with the disclosure that four more departments and bureaus have been approved for affiliation with the rapidly expanding clinic.

The legislative council of the Senate found nothing illegal in the allocation by the Home Owners Loan Corporation of $40,000 to establish the clinic. A memorandum to this effect was handed Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, a leader in District and Federal personnel affairs. It was unsigned as the legislative council is made up of lawyers who always remain anonymous, although they do practically all of the legal research for members of Congress.

The opinion came in the wake of a denunciation of the HOLC by a sub-committee of the House Appropriations Committee, which warned the HOLC against further "diversion" of public funds.

4 More Units Admitted.

Meantime, The Post learned that the board of trustees of Group Health Association has acted favorably upon admission of employes of four more Government units: Departments of Agriculture and Justice, Securities and Exchange Commission and Bureau of Standards.

With this development, officials of GHA and the parent HOLC believe that achievement of the maximum enrollment of 2,500 subscribers to the clinic's medical and hospitalization services will be reached in the next few weeks.

Recently they announced approval of applications for membership by employe groups in the Rural Electrification Administration, Farm Security Administration, Social Security Board and Federal Reserve Board. Facilities of the clinic, which opened November 1 at 1328 I street northwest, are geared to a comfort-

Lewis Suggests It's Time to Try 'Something Else'

Tucson, Ariz., Jan. 6 (AP).—John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, in an interview here today criticized business and governmental leadership and suggested "perhaps it is time something else is tried."

"I cannot say what may happen," he said, "but I do know that some people have found they could live happily, successfully, in a communal form in which the whole and not just a few were given consideration."

He did not elaborate on this statement, which he made after declaring "democracy is on trial today in this country, as it is over the whole world."

Mysterious 'Mr.D.' Of Robinson Case

AARON SHARFIN,

Egyptian Consulate Clerk in N. Y. Questioned by Federal Agents.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 6.—The intriguing mystery of "Mr. and Mrs. Donald L. Robinson" and the fraudulently obtained passports they carried whe nthey vanished in Moscow last month deepened today with assertion by Federal agents that a key man in the case was a clerk in the Egyptian consulate here.

He was identified by the agents as Aaron Sharfin, Russian-born resident of the Bronx, and as the mysterious "Mr. D.," who helped obtain the passports of the Robinsons and of Adolph Arnold Rubens through the office of Tammany County Clerk Albert Marinelli on April 3, 1936.

A. Dahab, vice consul in charge of the Egyptian consulate, said Sharfin was in his late 20s, a trusted worker, and described him as an "office boy" who stamped and delivered passports, carried money to the bank, and sometimes operated the telephone switchboard. Sharfin himself declined to talk, and it was only after 16 hours of questioning that he even gave his name.

Dahab said Sharfin was born in the United States, not Russia, as the Federal agents said.

Marinelli gave Thomas Fitch, State Department representative, the name of a "Mr. A." who had brought the passport applications to his office. "Mr. A." said he got the papers from "Mr. B." and the latter said he got them from "Mr. C."

This man, Harry Zuckerman, 28, an investigator for the Tenants' Research Bureau and a Tammany worker, provided the agents with Sharfin's description. He was promptly labeled "Mr. D."

In Moscow yesterday "Mrs. Robinson" was identified as Mrs. Ruth Marie Rubens, wife of the Rubens for whom a passport was fraudulently obtained. Mrs. Rubens herself got a valid passport through regular channels in Philadelphia.

London (Friday), Jan. 7 (U.P.).—The Daily Mirror's correspondent at Warsaw reported today that "Mrs. Donald L. Robinson," identified yesterday as Ruth Marie Rubens, of New York, has been executed by a Russian firing squad in a Moscow prison.

Fleet Hunts Navy Plane Lost With 7

By the Associated Press.

San Diego, Calif., Jan. 6.—One of the Navy's long-range patrol bombing planes vanished at sea last night with seven men aboard, officers disclosed today after a fruitless all-night search.

Twenty-four warships of the United States fleet began their search shortly after the plane dropped out of radio communication with other craft.

Sixty patrol planes from San Diego, together with all battleship and cruiser base planes, joined the hunt tonight.

At the same time the giant aircraft carriers Lexington and Saratoga, carrying 72 planes each, sailed from Long Beach, and planned to release their planes at daybreak, bringing the total airplanes active in the search to 300.

Secrecy enveloped details of the plane's disappearance as well as phases of the hunt. Capt. Alva D. Bernhard, chief of staff for the aircraft scouting force, refused to say where the plane was bound, or where it was when it last communicated with other craft.

Pilot's Name Revealed.

Bernhard likewise declined to name the seven aboard, but the Navy Department in Washington said the craft was piloted by Lieut. Truman Ernest Carpenter, with Aviation Cadet Philip O. Browning as co-pilot. Carpenter is from El Paso, Tex., and Passumpsic, Vt. Browning is a native of Lees Summit, Mo.

Enlisted men on board included: Edgar Angling, aviation chief machinist mate, 37, Norfolk, Va.; G. A. Mills, 22, radioman, third class, Prescott, Mich.; C. C. Creech, 22, aviation machinist mate, third class, Richland, N. Y.; William Erbe, 32, aviation chief machinist mate, San Diego, Calif.; Joe D. Adair, 21, radio man, third class, Caruthersville, Mo.

Capt. Bernhard said the plane was "capable of landing in any kind of a sea" and expressed belief it would be found.

Presumably the plane's last known position was about 200 miles northwest of here. It was said the search had begun in that area.

The missing plane is a twin-motored patrol craft such as the Navy has been flying over great distances.

Firemen Use Net To Rescue Kitten Trapped in Well

Members of the fire rescue squad yesterday rescued a 3-month-old kitten from the bottom of a 65-foot well at the rear of 3217 Fifteenth place southeast.

Mrs. Abraham Pavis called squadsmen who pondered for a while, then made a net of chicken wire, baited the net with a chicken's neck and lowered it into the well, which was dry.

For a half hour the kitten—she goes by the names of "Minnie" and "Alice"—mewed disinterestedly. Then she walked into the net and was hoisted to the surface.

Japan Places Her Censors in 3 Cable Offices

Messages From Shanghai Not Changed Yet, But Are Delayed.

By the Associated Press.

Japanese censors and communications officials yesterday (Thursday) established themselves in the offices of three foreign cable companies in Shanghai's International Settlement.

Earlier Japanese censors had been stationed in the International Radio Office, a new international organization which took over the functions previously exercised by the Chinese government radio administration.

The actions followed notice served early last month by the Japanese consul general in the city that Japanese authorities would take over all Chinese communications functions, including censorship.

Chinese long had maintained censors in communications offices. The censorship, however, was only a technical one as there apparently were no deletions made in messages.

Chinese censors left their posts when the Japanese were closing in on Shanghai in their undeclared war with China.

The arrival of Japanese censors had no immediate apparent effect on news dispatches to the United States. Messages were delayed but apparently were sent without deletions.

The Japanese asserted they were not yet censoring messages.

They established themselves in the offices of American Commercial Pacific, British Eastern Extension and Danish Great Northern.

News dispatches from Shanghai to New York are received by radio and cable to San Francisco or by way of Manila.

The arrival of Japanese censors in the Shanghai cable offices coincided with reports from Hongkong and Manila of disruption of cable service between Shanghai and Hongkong.

Hongkong's only connection with Shanghai was by way of London.

G.M.C. Chief Calls Slump 'Temporary'

Lack of Faith in Future Is Biggest Handicap, Says Knudsen.

Will Expand Five Plants to Meet Anticipated Spring Pick-Up.

By Sidney Olson.

The present business recession not only is unjustified but temporary, William S. Knudsen, president of the General Motors Corporation, told the Senate Unemployment Committee yesterday.

The towering 57-year-old Dane, who is paid $325,000 a year to manage the affairs of the G. M. C.—37 years ago, as a Danish immigrant, he made $10.50 a week as a shipyards reamer—testified a national lack of confidence in the future was the biggest handicap to business.

"We need a little assurance all down the line," he said earnestly, in the soft voice that retains a trace of accent. "Our dealers can't account for it. It's very astonishing. Everybody's afraid of something out there, but they don't know what it is."

To Expand Five Plants.

General Motors is planning to meet an expected spring pick-up by preparing five of its plants—Buffalo, Rochester, Dayton and two in New Jersey—for expansion, he revealed.

As the committee studied recession causes, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, introduced a resolution asking that the Senate Finance Committee be authorized to investigate a profit-sharing system operating in the country. The investigation would proceed with a view to legislation encouraging such systems by the grant of compensatory tax exemptions or tax rewards to all corporations voluntarily establishing profit-sharing systems between employers and employes. A sum of $5,000 was asked for the inquiry.

The resolution was based by Vandenberg upon the assertion that "the maintenance of the profit system is essential to the preservation of the competitive capitalistic system under which the United States has attained the largest measure of general economic welfare enjoyed by any people in the world."

Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, committee chairman, asked Knudsen about the President's suggestion that industry and Government hold round-table conferences to chart production and demand. Knudsen, speaking impatiently, said:

"I don't see how anyone in God's world could have told me before

Utility Executive Asks for Truce to Help Cure 'Depression.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 6.—A Roosevelt spokesman tonight said the country needed a "high volume, low-price economy" supported by good wages; an industrialist answered that the Government itself could cure sick business by ceasing "its attack on industry, big or little."

Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, the Government's chief denouncer of monopoly, and Wendell L. Willkie, the industrialist, head of the vast Commonwealth and Southern Utilities Corporation, put forward their sharply divergent views in a national forum—"America's Town Meeting of the Air."

Jackson, whose spectacular assaults of late upon sections of "big business" have made him one of Washington's most talked-of figures, again thrust in that direction.

Assails "Big Business."

"Small business," he said, "of course has its problems with government, but it is chiefly big business that is at war on many fronts with government."

Willkie asserted the theory that big and little business had "different and opposing interests" was "another myth," similar to the "bedtime story that the men who hold office in Washington are, by their very positions, endowed with a special virtue, that they are men of far vision and exceptional mental capacity."

"The fact of the matter is that small business and big business prosper under exactly the same conditions, and the conditions that are harmful to one are harmful to the other," he said.

"In fact, all business suffers more acutely from such things as heavy taxation, government hostility and timidity of investment, because it has no reserve with which to preserve itself in times of adversity. Big business supplies a market to small business not only by buying its products but by stimulating the general market; moreover, it furnishes small business with low-cost materials and supplies. The two are dependent, one upon the other. When we say that American industry is prosperous, we mean that the small businesses of America, which

Group to Fight For Hull Trade Treaty Policies

Non-Partisan Economic Committee Organized in Des Moines.

By the Associated Press.

Des Moines, Iowa, Jan. 6.—American leaders with divergent interests in the Nation's economic life announced tonight formation of "the economic policy committee" to turn public opinion in favor of Secretary of State Cordell Hull's foreign trade policies.

The committee membership of 50 represents a cross-section of American life, W. W. Waymack, Des Moines Register and Tribue editorial page director, temporary chairman, said.

Sprague a Member.

Waymack said it included liberals and conservatives; farm, labor, industrial, commercial and financial leaders; economists, political scientists and educators, and members of various religious faiths.

Among those on the committee are Senator N. C. Williamson of Lake Providence, La.; Elbert Bradley, General Motors Corporation vice president; Prof. O. M. W. Sprague, Harvard Graduate School; William Allen White, Emporia (Kans.) editor; Nicholas Murray Butler, Columbia University president; A. Steven Nance, C. I. O. textile workers organizing committee member; Charles P. Taft, Cincinnati lawyer; Lewis Douglas, former Director of the Budget; Col. Henry L. Stimson, former Secretary of State, and Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago.

Group to Incorporate.

The committee will hold its first annual meeting here January 16.

The committee would maintain no lobby in Washington for the purpose of influencing legislators, nor would it engage in any political campaign, the articles said.

The organization will be financed by contributions.

House Group 'Punishes' Rich Corporations Ruled by Few.

Ford Singled Out, Foe of Move Cries

By Robert C. Albright.

Penalty taxation of wealthy corporations controlled by a single family, or with stock closely held by a limited number of outsiders, was approved yesterday by a House Ways and Means sub-committee.

The departure from general downward revision of the undivided profits tax law was designed to force dividend payments for surtax purposes by from 500 to 1,000 closely-held operating corporations in the higher earnings brackets.

Representative Fred M. Vinson, chairman of the tax subcommittee, charged such companies frequently were used by the few persons in control as a device to avoid payment of high surtaxes on their incomes.

Opposition developed immediately. Representative Arthur P. Lamneck, of Ohio, Democratic member of the Ways and Means Committee, declared in the House the Administration was "relentlessly on the trail" of Henry Ford and corporations of his type. He said singling out of Ford and others for "penalties" was "in keeping with past performances" and in furtherance of radio attacks on business by Secretary of the Interior Ickes and Assistant Attorney General Jackson.

Others recalled the President's denial in his message that any responsible Administration official ever had undertaken to attack all business and all capital, and his insistence that "only a small minority have displayed poor citizenship."

In announcing the committee's action, Chairman Vinson estimated 200,000 corporations were filing tax returns, from 199,000 to 199,500 of which would get undivided profits tax relief under the recently approved flat rates. Special preferential treatment is provided for corporations earning under $25,000.

"The third group, we feel, under the standards we are specifying are using the corporate device for the express purpose of avoiding taxes—that is, to protect the individuals from paying the surtax on dividends," Vinson said.

This third group of between 500 and 1,000 closely held corporations, called by some members "the third basket," would be taxed at a rate virtually as high as the present steep undivided profits tax, while their fellow corporations, not closely held, would be granted the substantial relief already agreed upon.

Mrs. Hughes Returns to Washington Home of Her Father.

Bombs were bursting in air when Mrs. James J. Hughes, wife of the wounded commander of the American gunboat Panay, departed from China, but she told The Post yesterday that "it's a delightful country and I'd like to go back—even now."

Prime reason why Mrs. Hughes would like to go back is that her husband, Lieut. Comdr. James J. Mrs. Hughes last saw her husband in Hankow in September, when the U. S. Navy ordered naval wives and dependents out of China.

Colored Juryman Votes Death For Two of His Race in Assault

By the Associated Press.

Marion, Ark., Jan. 6.—An elderly colored man who helped make Southern history by taking his place in a jury box to help try a rape case tonight voted with 11 white men to send two members of his own race to the electric chair on charges of criminally assaulting a white girl.

The death verdict came at the end of a one-day trial in Crittenden County's old courtroom, packed with tense spectators. The jurors required seven minutes to reach a verdict.

Immediately after the verdict was reported, the prisoners were escorted back to their cells by heavily armed officers to guard against possible excitement as the aftermath of the girl victim's witness stand appearance.

White-haired John Claybrook, 65, wealthy colored farmer and timber man, had solemnly agreed he would vote to send the defendants to the electric chair if the State proved them guilty.

He was believed to be the first member of his race since Reconstruction Days to sit on a Southern jury trying a rape case against colored men.

The defendants were Frank (Buster) Carter, 26, and Theo Thomas, 25, both of Memphis.

Lynch Bill Foes In Filibuster to Harass Leaders

Reynolds Talks All Day in Senate; Barkley Strives for Quorum.

The second session of the Seventy-fifth Congress yesterday had its first taste of antilynching bill filibuster with quorum bells sounding a ringing tattoo all day and the majority leadership threatening "longer sessions" to get some business done.

Following a travelogue filibustering speech by Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina, the session reached comedy heights when the chamber voted to send the sergeant-at-arms after absentee members.

A quorum showed up on this roll call vote, so Majority Leader Barkley sought to "vacate" the sergeant-at-arms order. Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, filibuster generalissimo, objected. Then the Senate had to vote 44 to 13 not to send after absentees.

Seventh Roll Call.

It was the seventh roll call that had been ordered during the hectic day, and the net result was only one slight change in the antilynching bill, which is subject of the last-ditch fight by the South's opposition minority.

Twice during the day a majority of the Senate had failed to respond to the quorum call. When the required number failed to show up after several readings of the roll, Senator Connally moved for adjournment, which would have removed the bill from privileged status. He was defeated, 52 to 18.

Later in the day, when a majority again failed to answer a quorum call, Majority Leader Barkley himself moved that the sergeant at arms bring members in to their seats. This time the vote was 44 to 13, and that made a quorum. There was nothing to do but recall the sergeant.

Barkley Admonishes Members.

Then Barkley arose to admonish Senators of "the desirability and absolute necessity of Senators remaining in their places."

"The net result of this one whole day has been a single speech by the Senator from North Carolina (Reynolds)," Barkley said. "Since then, there's been an hour's delay because we didn't have a quorum.

"I would like to recess the Senate about 5 p. m. every day, providing we can transact some business. But Senators might as well understand right now that if there is only one speech a day, we are going to be here indefinitely."

Barkley pointed out that a new session was just getting underway, and it was his hope to take a sine die adjournment in May.

Pleads for Quorum.

Barkley said he did not blame the antilynching bill opponents for using every parliamentary means at their command in their fight on the measure, "but I do insist that every Senator remain on the floor." There are an estimated 70 votes for the bill, if it ever can be brought to a vote over Southern opposition.

During most of the afternoon, Senator Reynolds entertained members with a long discussion of world problems, launching into the economic development of China and Japan, the War Between the States, evidences of "communistic" influences in Spain, the possibilities of war between Japan and Russia and the cotton industry in India. Connally announced Reynolds will resume today.

At one point, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Massachusetts, fell with a crash to the rostrum, when his chair (he was presiding) upset. At another, Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, the Senate's conscientious whip, interrupted Barkley's rebuke to the Senate with an official announcement of absence.

Connally Denounces Bill.

Throughout the debate, Connally, leading the opposition fight, bobbed up to denounce the measure as a "gratuitous insult to the Southern States" which deliberately exempted "gang murders in the big cities." He called the measure a "political gesture" to "Harlem votes."

"Lynching in the South has almost entirely disappeared," Connally said in a printed statement. "This bill makes no effort to punish individual members of a mob. The Federal Government has no such constitutional power. Instead, this bill proposes to punish State sheriffs and State peace officers who may be unable to prevent a lynching. It further proposes to punish the innocent taxpayers of a country."

Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat), Indiana, co-author of the bill, said he was determined to force it to a vote this session because an overwhelming majority of the Senate is for it. He said the "gentlemen from the South" will have to take the responsibility if Administration economic and industrial programs are delayed by a fight on the bill.

House Begins Work.

While the antilynching debate raged back and forth, the House began work on the session's first appropriation bill—independent offices—and Senate and House conferees on the farm and housing bills struggled to iron out wide differences in the two versions of each measure. Housing conferees argued over minor provisions of the housing measure preparatory to a fight to remove the Lodge prevailing wage amendment, attached by the Senate. Labor organizations are supporting the amendment, but the Administration is opposed to it. President William Green of the American Federation of Labor telegraphed members of the conference he favored payment of prevailing wages to those employed on the new program.

Farm bill conferees were facing a similar tussle in the fight waged by the Administration to remove from the crop control measure the Bolleau-McNary amendment, freezing out new dairy competition by denying payments to farmers using retired acres to pasture livestock. Farm bill conferees yesterday agreed on the tobacco section of the bill, least controversial provision.

Working for Washington

Yaden Urges Citizens' Groups To 'Follow Up' Resolutions

JAMES G. YADEN.

Veteran Former President of Federation Hopes Comprehensive Statistical Study Will Be Made of District Taxation.

By Christine Sadler.

Organized citizenship in Washington enters the New Year with greater opportunities for constructive work than it ever had before, in the opinion of James G. Yaden, who served as president of the Federation of Citizens Associations longer than any other person and is one of the District's best known civic leaders.

The greatest fault to be found in citizenship work as it is practiced in the District, Yaden believes, is the habit of passing resolutions without "following them up."

"We are too prone to pass resolutions and stop right there, believing we have done our job," he declares.

Yaden's main aspiration for the federation at the time his five years as president were up was that its complaints about the taxation situation in the District would be followed up by a comprehensive and statistical study that would present the facts.

Aims of Study Stated.

He wished to see: (1) A breakdown of the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia by departments. (2) A breakdown of the income of the District of Columbia from all different sources. (3) A study of the cost of government of other cities of comparable size and population. (4) A breakdown of the different sources of income in those cities.

"If this were done," he explains, "we would then know the per capita cost of government in the District of Columbia and could make a comparative study of the various sources of income in the different cities studied.

"We would know the current running expenses of the city government, exclusive of bonded indebtedness. Since Washington is practically free of debt, we would know whether our government is costing too much and, if so, in what respect.

"We would also be able to decide the best source of income, from a study of the various cities, and in this way we would be able to benefit by applying the best methods to our own city.

Expense Called Small.

"This study would not cost very much and would, in my judgment, be more enlightening than any and all of the studies which have heretofore been made in the City of Washington . . . It would be particularly enlightening to know how other cities of comparable size and area raise funds for administration of the city government."

Yaden served as president of the federation during the 1927 and 1928 terms and then served three more years, beginning in 1932. At the expiration of his last term in 1935 he became a delegate from the Petworth Citizens Association, and served in this capacity until last October.

Due to the pressure of many activities and his job as chief examiner for the Civil Service Commission he no longer attends the federation meetings. But he keeps in touch with its work and continues his civic work through the Petworth organization. "I expect to continue my personal civic work," he asserts.

He served as president of the Community Center Council, Public Schools, for six years—a job which he has also relinquished.

Some of the many jobs Yaden continues to hold include: chaplainship in a Masonic lodge, chaplainship in the Spanish-American War Veterans, and his Sunday school class. At the Petworth Baptist Church he teaches a class of between 75 and 80 men and intends "to give more time to them."

An illustration of the esteem in which he is held is found in the fact that while he was absent one Sunday the class decided to become the James G. Yaden Class.

Yaden was born in Tennessee, but was raised in Kentucky and once was a member of the Kentucky House of Representatives. He came to Washington in 1910 to take a job with the Census Bureau. He has been with the Civil Service Commission since 1912. He votes in Kentucky and would continue to do so if the District had suffrage—although he is a firm believer in District suffrage.

"I think it is time the people who live here and have no suffrage should be permitted to become American citizens," he declares.

Engineering Awards Gain 4 Per Cent in Year

New York, Jan 6 (AP).—Engineering construction awards in 1937 amounted to $2,437,623,000, a gain of 4 per cent over 1936, the Engineering News-Record reported today.

Geographically, the Middle Atlantic States, with a volume of $1,058,364,000, were 39 per cent above last year, and the Middle West, with $422,723,000, was 2 per cent ahead. Losses ranging from 13 to 23 per cent were reported in other sections.

Truman Assails PennroadCorp. Stock Methods

Improper Conduct of Its Affairs Laid to Holding Corporation.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, acting chairman of the Senate Railroad Finance Committee, asserted the holding company had not conducted its affairs properly because:

It did not "specifically set out" to prospective investors what ti intended to do with proceeds from its sale of stock.

It paid out of its treasury $22,000 to "pay the losses of outside speculators not connected with the company."

It participated in a "window-dressing" transaction which enabled the Intercity Trust Co. of Philadelphia to improve its cash position at the end of 1929 for use in making on annual statement.

Benefited Stockholders.

Committee records showed Pennroad was organized in 1929 by officers and directors of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. to make investments for the benefit of Pennsylvania stockholders. Pennsylvania stockholders were given first opportunity to purchase voting trust certificates issued by Pennroad.

George W. Bovenizer, partner in Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Pennroad and Pennsylvania bankers, and A. J. County, Pennsylvania vice president and a director of Pennroad, verified details of the transactions, but disagreed with Truman's conclusions. S. H. Odgen, Pennroad treasurer, testified about some details.

The Missouri Senator criticized the transactions as "not proper," as "entirely wrong" and, in the case of the Integrity Trust Bank, "bad practice." County testified Pennroad, believing Pennsylvania stockholders would not fully subscribe for the holding company's issue of voting trust certificates, arranged to sell up to 100,000 shares at $15 a share to persons other than Pennsylvania stockholders.

Favored Ones Listed.

A list was made up of persons to whom these shares were to be sold, including a number of large shippers from whom Pennsylvania was seeking traffic. County denied the contention of investigators that this "special list" was arranged "exclusively" to benefit the Pennsylvania Railroad. He contended it also was intended to benefit the interests of Pennroad.

Several of those on the "special list" had sold the shares short when the market price went over $15. County said Pennroad paid six of the subscribers $22,000 to cover their losses.

A committee examiner asserted the result of the transaction was that "Pennroad suffered loss from its inability to fulfill commitments, of no real value to Pennroad, which had been incurred at the suggestion of Pennsylvania directors and for the benefit of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co."

"That's not my conception of it," Odgen said.

He told the committee the reimbursements were "necessary."

The officials said that on December 31, 1929, Pennroad paid $517,672.11 to the Integrity Trust Co. for a block of bonds and resold them to the bank on January 3, 1930, for a profit of about $1,000 under terms of a repurchase agreement.

The American Automobile Association yesterday tentatively placed the 1937 death toll from motor-vehicle accidents at 39,243.

The A. A. A. statement is based on telegraphic reports from motor vehicle and other departments of 38 States and the District of Columbia, and estimates based on available figures from 10 other States. On this basis the motoring body estimated that total motor-vehicle fatalities for 1937 is already around 5 per cent above that for 1936, and may go higher when final figures are tabulated.

Former Envoy Loses His Eye in Operation

The operation, to remove a tumor, was made by Dr. Dean Lewis, director of the department of surgery, and Dr. Frank B. Walsh. Admitted to the hospital December 7, Col. Judah was reported improving rapidly.

2-Cent Subsidy Asked For Cotton Growers

Dr. Clarence Poe, of Raleigh, N. C., editor of the Progressive Farmer, proposed to President Roosevelt yesterday that provision be made for a 2-cents-a-pound subsidy on cotton, in addition to the benefit growers would receive under the new farm bill.

Poe said, after a conference with the President, that it was "absolutely necessary by a processing tax or otherwise" that farmers receive the additional aid during the next two or three years.

The Gallup Poll

American Institute of Public Opinion Reports Third Term Sentiment Declining.

By Dr. George Gallup.
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Jan. 6.—Although President Roosevelt's popularity, as measured by American Institute of Public Opinion surveys, is now approximately the same as it was when he was re-elected, the number of persons who favor a third term for Roosevelt has declined sharply. Whereas 37 per cent of voters polled in July said they would like to see Roosevelt run again, the figure has dropped to 33 per cent today.

George Gallup.

The July survey found a fair-sized majority of Democrats—57 per cent—indorsing a third term. But today that majority has shrunk to a bare 51 per cent. This means that any third-term movement at the present time would run the risk of opposition from nearly half of the 27,000,000 who voted for Roosevelt in 1936.

Republicans polled by the Institute are almost unanimously against a third term, the vote being 96 per cent "no" to 4 per cent "yes." This solid G. O. P. disapproval, when added to the opposition of a good-sized block of Democrats, clearly indicates the difficulties the President would face if he should change his mind and run again.

The Institute survey is not to be taken as a forecast of 1940. Many things can happen between now and then. But the survey does indicate that a major change in sentiment would have to take place if Roosevelt were to have a chance for re-election. The recent trend of sentiment has been as follows:

	For Third Term	Against Third Term
December, 1936	31%	69%
March, 1937	36	64
July, 1937	37	63
Today	33	67

The survey found both farmers and laborers opposed to a Roosevelt third term despite special New Deal legislation in their behalf. In fact, the poll shows only one important group in favor of another term for Roosevelt. That group is the unemployed, including persons on relief. All unemployed, both reliefers and non-reliefers, vote 54 per cent for a third term, 46 per cent against. The affirmative majority among reliefers is a little higher—59 per cent.

In general, sentiment on the third-term issue divides sharply along economic lines, with the well-to-do least in favor of a third term, and the poor most in favor.

	For Third Term	Against Third Term
Upper Income Group	17%	83%
Middle Income Group	32	68
Lower Income Group	44	56

Unbalanced Budget.

President Roosevelt's statement this week that the budget will not be balanced comes as no surprise to a majority of Americans. Last October, two weeks after the President promised a balanced budget, the Institute asked voters: "Do you think this Administration will be able to balance the national budget during the next year?" The reply was overwhelmingly "no." Eighty-four per cent predicted that the books would not be balanced.

This does not mean, however, that the public is not in favor of budget balancing. During the last year the Institute has repeatedly found that a substantial majority of all voters want the Government to erase its annual deficit. But in this instance the Institute found the rank and file of voters realistic forecasters of coming events.

Ludlow Resolution.

Next Monday, January 10, the Ludlow resolution will probably come up for consideration on the floor of the House of Representatives. This much-publicized measure, which provides that war may not be declared without a vote of the people (except in case of invasion), has divided the peace organizations and wrought a warm controversy in Washington. Does the resolution reflect public sentiment?

Judging by the last Institute survey, the answer, up to the time of the Panay affair, was "yes." More than 70 per cent of all persons polled in October indorsed the Ludlow plan. But it would be a mistake to assume that voters indorse the measure because they want peace at any price. Other Institute surveys have shown that the majority of Americans favor increasing our national defense at the same time that our State Department maneuvers to keep us out of war.

During the last two years the Institute's army of field reporters have talked to tens of thousands of voters about neutrality and peace. The findings indicate that if the man in the street could write his own program for keeping the Nation out of war, these are the principles he would favor:

2.—Make no entangling political alliances with foreign nations or with the League of Nations.

4.—Leave declaration of war up to the people themselves.

The first two principles—military preparedness and political isolation—go far back into American tradition. The third—keeping our nationals out of war zones—is an integral part of the neutrality act which itself stems from a widespread public belief that our involvement in the World War was a mistake. The fourth principle—the war referendum—seems to indicate a feeling on the part of voters that peace is best maintained when decisions are in the hands of the many rather than the few. The same sentiment was found by the Institute in a survey last October in which the majority declared they would rather put neutrality in the hands of Congress than leave it to the discretion of the President.

Perhaps they are right, perhaps they are wrong. But that is the way they feel. The job of the Institute is merely to ascertain the facts about public sentiment.

Rep. Hill Can Take Seat in Senate 'as Soon as He Is Ready,' Gov. Bibb Graves Declares.

THE SENATE'S NEWEST addition—although he is a veteran of eight consecutive terms in the House—Representative Lister Hill, of Alabama, can take office "as soon as he is ready," Gov. Bibb Graves of Hill's State said on a visit here yesterday. Graves said he had notified Hill's Montgomery office he would leave it to the nominee to decide when the appointment should be made.

"When he feels that his usefulness in the Senate would be greater than his usefulness in the House," Graves said, we'll clear the decks for him."

Until then, Mrs. Dixie Bibb Graves, wife of the Governor, will continue to serve as Alabama's junior Senator. Hill was nominated in a primary Tuesday to succeed Mrs. Graves, appointed to the temporary vacancy after Senator Black was named to the Supreme Court.

Another Senate change will occur January 18, when A. Harry Moore will leave to become Governor of New Jersey.

REPRESENTATIVE TOBEY (Republican), of New Hampshire, told the House he had introduced a resolution calling for a Congressional investigation of published charges that Tammany supporters of Representative Bloom (Democrat), of New York, had profited financially from the activities of the Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission headed by Bloom.

He brought to the House floor statements attributed to a news syndicate, accusing Bloom of giving James J. Hines and William Solomon, Tammany leaders, an opportunity to share profits from the sale of a book, "The Constitution," and "a vast array of merchandise that the commission is offering through publicity and advertising releases."

Bloom termed the charges "evidently an attack on Tammany Hall" and called them "the most outrageous ever heard of."

CHAIRMAN ADAMS (Democrat), Colorado, said the Senate Public Lands Committee today would discuss the President's nomination of T. K. Burlew to be First Assistant Secretary of the Interior.

The committee voted recently to refer the nomination to a subcommittee, and some Senators interpreted this action to mean Western members might oppose Burlew's nomination.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, who made the motion to send the nomination to a sub-committee, said: "I do not know whether I will oppose Burlew. I have been too busy to give it any thought in the last few days."

SENATOR ALLEN ELLENDER and Gov. Richard W. Leche, of Louisiana, are now on record with denials they will resign to accept Federal judgeships.

"I'm not going to resign," Gov. Leche said. "I have no thought of resigning."

Ellender previously had made a similar statement.

A report had been published in Louisiana that Leche planned to resign before the May session of the Legislature to fill one of two additional Federal judgeships recommended for the State by the judicial conference and Attorney General Cummings.

REPRESENTATIVE JAMES W. Wadsworth (Republican), New York, in a denunciation of Administration spending, urged all Government agencies to "re-dedicate themselves to thrift and frugality." Wadsworth told the House the President's budget message, "like all his public papers and addresses," omitted the word "thrift."

Exports Gain From U. S. for Chinese Area

By the Associated Press.

United States merchandise exports to Japan fell off sharply in November, but shipments to China, including Hongkong, increased, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

The department said shipments to Japan totaled $18,133,000 in November, compared with $24,100,000 in the same month 1936. Shipments to China were shown as $2,895,000, compared with $3,227,000 a year ago.

The apparent decline in exports to China was more than offset by an increase from $543,000 in November, 1936, to $3,958,000 in November, 1937, in shipments to the British port of Hongkong, through which much Chinese trade has been routed since the Japanese captured Shanghai.

United States, Chile Sign Pact.

At the State Department yesterday it was announced a provisional commercial agreement between the United States and Chile had been signed at Santiago.

The two governments agreed to apply to each other unconditional most favored nation treatment in customs duties and other matters of mutual trade.

The instrument supplants a similar agreement signed in September, 1931. It is designed to establish formal trade relations between the two countries pending the negotiation of a more comprehensive commercial accord or a treaty of friendship, commerce and navigation.

Glenn Frank Will Head New G. O. P. Group

Accepts Chairmanship of Body Formed to Study Economic Problems.

By the United Press.

Dr. Glenn Frank, former president of the University of Wisconsin, last night accepted the chairmanship of the newly formed program committee of the Republican Party and appealed for nonpartisan co-operation to relieve the "gravity of a situation which cuts across all sections and all groups."

Frank said he was accepting the new post without "any prior obligation."

He acknowleged the "business" of the program group is not to promote the interests of any candidate, nor to write platforms, which he said is a task for State and national party conventions.

"This commission," he said, "is a body of laymen asked to devote themselves behind the lines of formal party action to a study of the extraordinary grave social and economic difficulties that now confront the Nation . . .

"The gravity of the situation cuts across the traditional boundaries of all parties, all sections and all groups. I hope, therefore, that this commission will have access to the deepest desires and best thoughts of workers, farmers, professional men and women, businessmen, small and large, regardless of party lines or sectional interests."

Hague Carries His C.I.O. Fight To the Nation

Broun Unsuccessfully Tries to Heckle Speaker in Jersey Broadcast.

By the United Press.

Jersey City, Jan. 6.—Mayor Frank Hague carried his war against the C. I. O. to the Nation tonight and promised 15,000 listeners in Jersey City armory that the John L. Lewis organization will never enter this city with its "forces of intimidation."

His address, broadcast nationally, was occasioned by recent efforts of C. I. O. organizers to start unionization drives here. Police arrested them or deported them. Since then the C. I. O. has been unable to obtain a Jersey City meeting hall.

That this had been a city of law and order means nothing to these "invaders," Hague said, adding: "They have decided that the industries of this city must fall and they must be given the right to intimidate and browbeat the working people of this city. Jersey City is marked for destruction."

Describes His Work.

Hague described his work against the C. I. O. as an effort "to protect our city from invasion by the Communists and other red groups under the mask of a labor organization."

United States Senator Harry Moore, Governor-elect, joined with Hague in denouncing the C. I. O. as "communistic."

Hague was interrupted twice—the first time when a reporter at the press table shouted "nuts" as the speaker asserted the Communists had led the American Newspaper Guild into the C. I. O.

A moment later Heywood Broun, president of the guild, shouted, "That isn't so, but go ahead," when Hague said that Morris Ernst, counsel for the American Civil Liberties Union and the C. I. O., had organized the guild.

"Who interrupted?" Hague remarked and a policeman stepped forward and touched Broun on the shoulder.

When Hague concluded, Broun attempted to see him on the platform, but police held him back. Broun said he wanted to protest "these slanders to the newspaper guild."

Morris Ernst, counsel of the American Civil Liberties Union, and Spaulding Frazer, dean of the University of Newark Law School, defended the C. I. O. in a radio broadcast from New York immediately following Hague's speech.

"Danger to Nation."

Ernst, addressing his speech directly at the mayor told him he was a "danger to the Nation" and suggested that he "return Jersey City" to the United States.

He said that "it's a lie that war veterans in Hudson County were supporting Hague in his fight against the C. I. O., as the mayor claimed.

Ernst charged Hague could only fill the armory by "threats and coercion" of city jobholders.

Hague offered to prove that the C. I. O. was dominated by Communists and named Harry Bridges, West Coast seamen's union leader, and John Brophy, C. I. O. leader, as "communistic." He said Lewis, chairman of the C. I. O., years ago had denounced Brophy as a Communist.

He attributed formation of the C. I. O. to failure of Communists to gain control of the American Federation of Labor.

"Immediately war was declared by this Red army," he said, "on several of the greatest industries in this country. Riot, disorder, bloodshed, sit-down strikes and property destruction began, defiance of law and order was boldly declared and attacks made on Government in many cities. They had to move fast, they had to strike and make progress immediately. Lines were drawn, with the American Federation of Labor on one side and the C. I. O. on the other."

Streets Patrolled.

A 2-mile area about the armory, streets leading to which were blocked by picket fences, was covered by 350 policemen and 75 officers, and 50 other police were inside the building. An American Legion band furnished music.

C. I. O. organizers have been barred from Jersey City, and Broun was at the press table solely as a "member of the working press."

Some 4,000 legion members and other war veterans paraded to the armory.

Congressman Edward Hart denied the meeting was a demonstration against organized labor but said the issue "is whether we shall be permitted to maintain our homes in peace or submit to the dictation of Soviet agents, to be rent and torn asunder by red terrorism."

R. S. Carmichael, chairman of tonight's meeting, said it had been arranged by the city's chamber of commerce "to indicate our approval of Mayor Hague's fight to keep un-American agitators, radicals, reds and communists out of our city."

Robert J. Carey, Republican lawyer and political foe of the Democratic Hague, complimented the mayor on his determined stand against the C. I. O.

"If these elements are to be permitted to have full sway," Carey said, "the words 'personal liberty' soon will disappear from the dictionary of our national life."

Senator Robert La Follette, chairman of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, has been asked to investigate Hague's actions, and Ernst went to Washington today to charge before the Department of Justice and the Postoffice Department that persons "acting in the interest" of Hague had tampered with mail sent by the union to Jersey City sympathizers.

Nuckols, Pisani Again Held in Gambling Raid

Two Out on $3,000 Bond Since Previous Conviction Here.

Two gambling raids yesterday netted 16 prisoners, two of them out on $3,000 bond pending appeals from recent conspiracy convictions.

The two are Carroll P. Nuckols, alias "Nubby" Nuckols, 39, of 1423 R street northwest, and Lawrence F. Pisani, 23, 1415 Rhode Island avenue northwest. Both were charged with setting up a gaming table and released on $3,000 apiece for arraignment today before U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Police say both Nuckols and Pisani are well known in District gambling circles. They were arrested in the series of gambling raids last summer led by Lieut. Floyd Truscott.

They were arrested yesterday in a raid in the 1400 block of I street northwest, where police say they seized a quantity of gambling equipment. The raid was led by Sergt. George Deyoe.

Twelve other prisoners were released after questioning. A third man, Patrick R. Geary, 57, of a local hotel, also was charged with setting up a gaming table, and bond set at $1,500.

'Bombs' From Air Aid Capture of Six DuckTraps in Md.

Cambridge, Md., Jan. 6 (AP).—Tissue-paper "bombs," tossed from a Navy seaplane as markers for raiding squads, led to capture of six illegal duck traps on Smith Island, startled the ducks, and definitely irked the islanders, an official report of the incident disclosed today.

Orin Steele, of Cambridge, game management agent for the U. S. Biological Survey, reported the "bombing" to State Game Warden E. Lee LeCompte.

Two of the "bombs" landed in the main street of Tylerton, one of three tiny communities on the island, Steele said, and "everybody and his brother" rushed into the street to shake fists at the seaplane.

Jackson Reported New Deal's Choice For N.Y. Governor

By the United Press.

The Roosevelt Administration has decided to press for nomination and election of Robert H. Jackson, youthful Assistant Attorney General, as next Governor of New York and has begun to work quietly toward this end, it was reported reliably last night.

Postmaster General James A. Farley and Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, reportedly have told State leaders they would not accept nomination, and will try to swing support to Jackson.

Wagner will introduce Jackson at the New York Jackson Day dinner Saturday. Jackson may also give his first public hint he is a candidate. He has withheld announcement reportedly in order to be in a position to dictate his own terms should party leaders decide to draft him. He is said to wish to be free to name his own running mates, if nominated.

Sumners Urged For Court Post By Colleagues

House Judiciary Group, of Which He Is Chairman, Commends Texan.

By the Associated Press.

Representative Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, an outspoken critic of President Roosevelt's defeated court reorganization bill, received the backing of the House Judiciary Committee yesterday for appointment to the Supreme Court.

The committee decided to ask President Roosevelt to consider Sumners as a successor to Justice Sutherland, who will retire January 18.

Sumners Absent.

The decision was made in the absence of Sumners, who is chairman of the committee. Within an hour afterward, 15 members had signed a letter to the President saying:

"With unbounded confidence in Judge Sumners, we wholeheartedly commend him to your favorable consideration, and certify our own conviction that your appointment of him would redound to the lasting honor of your Administration, and of the Supreme bench."

Sumners, who came to Congress in 1913, became chairman of the Judiciary Committee six years ago.

He helped obtain House approval last spring of the Supreme Court retirement bill, under which Justices Vandevanter and Sutherland decided to leave active duty, but made a speech against the court reorganization bill.

George Also Groomed.

A suggestion that the President nominate Senator George (Democrat), Georgia, to succeed Sutherland came from Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, a frequent critic of Administration policies.

Senators Minton, of Indiana; Schwellenbach, of Washington, and Logan, of Kentucky, Democratic supporters of the President's court reorganization bill, were mentioned in corridor and cloak room gossip as possible nominees.

Others mentioned in general speculation included Robert Jackson, Assistant Attorney General, who is leading the Administration's current campaign against monopoly; Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York; Solicitor General Stanley Reed; former Senator Sam G. Bratton, of New Mexico, now a Federal circuit judge, Gov. Frank Murphy, of Michigan, and Gov. Philip F. La Follette, of Wisconsin.

In a letter to Justice Sutherland, President Roosevelt congratulated him for "many years of public service," and expressed the hope the justice and his wife would attend the annual White House dinner for members of the Supreme Court, January 20.

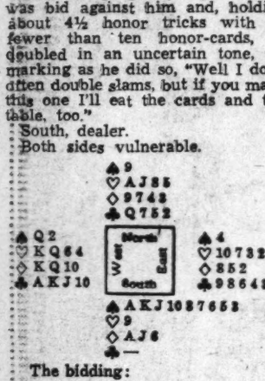
Contract

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Indigestion.

The most disgusted bridge player in New York is a friend of mine who held the West hand as shown below. A few nights ago, in a rubber bridge game, a grand slam was bid against him and, holding about 4½ honor tricks with no fewer than ten honor-cards, he doubled in an uncertain tone, remarking as he did so, "Well I don't often double slams, but if you make this one I'll eat the cards and the table, too."

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
7 ♠	Dble.	Pass	Pass
Pass

I was sitting behind South and since I knew him to be an excellent player, I began to smell a mouse when I heard the remarkable series of bids. There was no stake involved and I strongly suspect that the other three players put up a job against West since, of course, South would not have dreamed of bidding as he did. To begin, he had no opening two-bid, although it is true he had only three losers. Next, his jump to seven spades would have been outrageously optimistic unless the deal had been made to order. At any rate, West, making his speech as above, banged down the club King, and from that point on could never get out of hot water.

The last trump made West clutch his hair—there was no discard he could make that would not give the declarer all the tricks. A heart discard would establish the Ace and Jack and result in a further squeeze. This was equally true of either a diamond or a club discard. West was inexorably caught in a continuing squeeze in three suits. Thus, declarer's 11 top tricks were converted into a sure 13.

Curiously enough, either a top heart or diamond opening lead by West would have killed the squeeze and defeated the contract.

Scientific Advance.

Working quietly out of the public eye, the Agriculture Department scientists—those in the Bureau of Home Economics in this instance—have made another advance for the human welfare. This column today is able to present the result of long studies by the bureau scientists in the field of vitamins as these affect eyesight.

One of the early signs of a shortage of vitamin A is shown by a condition known as partial night-blindness. Under normal conditions the eyes adapt themselves quite rapidly to changes in illumination. Normal well-nourished people, who, for example, come out of bright sunlight into a dimly lighted room do not see objects clearly at first but after a few minutes see objects in the dimly lighted room quite distinctly.

If their diet does not include liberal amounts of the foods which are important dietary sources of vitamin A, it will require an abnormally long time for them to see in a dimly lighted room where they have been exposed to bright light such as bright sunshine. The condition described as partial night-blindness has been known at least as early as 1500 B. C. Also Hippocrates had recommended that certain foods would cure this condition. It is however only recently that it has become known that it was the vitamin A in foods which was responsible for the cure of partial night-blindness.

Perfectly normal, well-nourished people should show considerable variation in the ability of their eyes to adjust themselves to dim illumination. For this reason some of the workers at the Bureau of Home Economics have been making a study of normal people. When persons are found who show a slow adjustment to dim light they are given foods of known vitamin A content regularly for a period of several weeks, and the tests are repeated at intervals.

In order to make standard tests the subject is asked to look at an illuminated screen through an eyepiece of a specially-designed instrument. Then the screen is removed and a very dim light is placed for the subject. This dim light is quickly adjusted so that the person is just able to detect a light. At short intervals these measurements are repeated as the subject gains ability to see with less light.

By means of such experiments it will be possible to know how much vitamin A is required for the best possible dark vision. This quantity of vitamin A may not be enough for the maximum state of health, but at least the quantity provided in the diet should not be less than the quantity needed to maintain the best possible dark vision.

Persons whose diets include milk, butter, eggs, carrots and green, leafy vegetables in reasonable quantities need have no fear of a shortage of vitamin A. This vitamin can also be stored in the body to such an extent that several weeks of vitamin A shortage is seemingly not injurious, it was stated.

The Federal Workers School, conducted by the U. F. W. A., announces six new courses for its second term which begins this month; the courses are in addition to the 17 that began last fall. Delbert Clark, manager of the Washington Bureau of the New York Times, will give a course in journalism. According to the announcement, the course will attempt a broad survey of the newspaper field by types of publications, including the impartial press, the partisan press, the left and right wing press, the yellow press and so on. "The course will be conducted on entirely disillusioned lines, and the instructor will not appear as the advocate of prosecutor of any one catagory of journalism. Rather, he will try to give an intelligent exposition and critique of all types, with primary instruction in how to succeed on the staff of any of them."

Floyd Dell, the novelist, will have a class in literature; Donald Montgomery, consumers' counsel of the Agriculture Department, will conduct a symposium in consumers' problems—other classes will include psychology, photography and ballroom dancing.

Lines from the FCA.: We learn that during the fiscal year, 1937, the local FCA office bought 22,000 boxes of paper clips, and from this fact someone in authority has commented: "If during the year each of the employes in the Washington office had refrained from wasting one paper clip on each working day, the purchase would have amounted to only 17,500 boxes—a saving of 4,500 boxes. A recent examination of a number of wastebaskets, taken at random, revealed anywhere from three to 17 good paper clips in each basket—the wastage of a single day" . . . To all of which survey the Liberty Leaguers will undoubtedly cry: "Penny wiseness in a pound-foolish government."

The Washington office has said a genuine hello to newcomers, as follow: Miss Jessie Moline, of Sunderland, Mass., appointed to the Stenographic Section, and Mrs. Mary Huxley, of Baltimore, appointed to the examination Division. . . . On Sunday the Farm Credit Club Circle Hikers move from Relay, Md., through Patapsco State Park. Cars will leave the building here at 9 a. m.

Frank W. Peck, formerly co-operative bank commissioner in the FCA office here, has been elected to succeed Roy A. Nelson, president of the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul, whose resignation becomes effective February 1. Nelson's resignation was prompted by the condition of his health; he had served since November 1, 1933.

Present Slump Is Temporary, Says Knudsen

Jobs

December that in a few weeks orders would drop off 55 per cent!"

Knudsen—known as "Bill" ever since he told the shipyards timekeeper in 1900 that his name was Signius Wilhelm Poul Knudsen—a former locomotive boiler repairer and bicycle shop foreman, impressed the committee by his genial simplicity.

Traces Recession Trend.

Occasionally fingering the lapel ribbon with which the King of Denmark made him a Danish knight, Knudsen made these major points in his testimony:

Sales last December fell to 45.6 per cent of the December, 1936, total, in the company's sharpest recorded slump.

Used car sales last year were 70 per cent of those in 1936.

Labor costs were increased in 1936 and 1937 by 25 per cent, and that the over-all cost increase amounted to 13 per cent.

Taxes paid in 1937 amounted to $109,840,000, minus $33,000,000 for excise taxes, to make a final total of $76,840,000.

Total surplus for the first 11 months in 1937 reached the peak of $452,547,000, an increase of surplus by $54,000,000, despite the undistributed corporate surplus profits tax.

Cash and Government securities were decreased by $30,000,000 in the surplus, composed chiefly of plants and inventories.

In laying off 30,000 General Motors workers in December, he was guarded by business reasons solely, and that he did not consider unemployment compensation laws when making the slash.

"If this business recession keeps on very long, that $450,000,000 surplus will disappear so fast we couldn't keep track of it."

Immaculately Clad.

Knudsen sat at the witness table in the huge white marble caucus room of the Senate Office Building, immaculately dressed in a brown serge suit, purple tie and grey spats, repeatedly jerking his horn-rimmed pince-nez from his nose to make sweeping gestures in answer to the questions of Byrnes.

As newsreel cameras whirred and photographers' flash-bulbs flared, the big-shouldered motor magnate poured himself one tumbler after another of mineral water, constantly wiping his grizzled white mustache with an enormous handkerchief.

Byrnes and Senators Bennett Clark, Missouri, and Carl Hatch, New Mexico, Democrats, drove steadily at Knudsen to discover whether he believed re-employment of the laid-off 30,000 men by General Motors would have at this time a "tremendous psychological effect."

Knudsen said perhaps it would have an advantageous psychological effect, but that it "wouldn't be good business."

"Yes, we could re-employ them; but what would we give them to do?" he said.

"Added Expenses."

Byrnes said:

"Wouldn't it be better to keep the men at work? Then you would get the benefit of their work instead of the WPA?

Knudsen said he looked upon unemployment compensation acts and the WPA as "added expenses to business.' He said that when "you share the work you get down to one day a week. The more you share the less there is to do."

He traced the layoffs as follows: On Labor Day, in September the company employed 174,000 men. This rose the first week of November to 221,000 men, but fell at the end of the week of December 4 to 216,000 men, and by Christmas had fallen another 22,000 men. The balance were laid off from Christmas to the January 1.

"We didn't lay off men to get business bad," he added. "Business was bad, first. It's not a nice thing to have to lay off 30,000 men. We can only run our business on a basis of business done. We kept the men as long as we could."

He smiled at the argument that the company's $452,000,000 surplus should be used to maintain employment despite lack of orders from dealers, explaining the surplus was largely in plant equipment and inventories.

As Knudsen left the White House later in the day, he told reporters with a smile:

"The President gave us his views on the auto industry." John D. Biggers unemployment census director, accompanied him to the conference with Mr. Roosevelt.

Last night the committee announced that Homer Martin, head of the United Automobile Workers of America, an affiliate of the Committee for Industrial Organization, would appear at the afternoon session today. In the morning, Robert E. Wood, president, Sears, Roebuck & Co., of Chicago, will appear, as will William Green, president, American Federation of Labor.

Layoff of 30,000 Workers Necessary, Knudsen Tells Senate Committee

His company experienced the severest sales drop in its history in November and December, making necessary the laying off of 30,000 men, William S. Knudsen, president of General Motors, told the Senate Unemployment Committee yesterday. He said the drop was "wholly unexpected and beyond all control." He is shown above in a series of candid pictures as he testified.

HOLC Was Within Law in Setting Up Group Health Clinic At Cost of $40,000, Senate's Legislative Council Reports able maximum of 2,500 clients and there are no immediate prospects of enlarging the establishment, officials indicated.

Now serving slightly more than 1,000 subscribers on a monthly fee basis payable in sickness and in health, the clinic will be easily self-sustaining with a 2,500 membership, they asserted.

"Quite a few" other agencies and employe groups are on the waiting list, it was added.

"However questionable the wisdom of the action of the board of directors of the HOLC in entering the contract with the Group Health Association may have been," the legislative counsel stated in a memorandum," since Congress did not specifically authorize the corporation to expend its funds for the purpose of providing medical services and hospitalization to its employes, it is not clear that the expenditure was one which the corporation did not have authority to make."

After the House Appropriations sub-committee had been informed during hearings on the supply bill that the $40,000 had been largely spent and was consequently unreturnable, it warned the HOLC against making a similar contribution in the future.

"Entirely irrespective of the merits of the work proposed to be done under the Group Health Association, for which the Home Owners' Loan Corporation recently made a contribution of $40,000," the report said, "the committee is of the unanimous opinion that the expenditure was not one authorized by any law and that such expenditures should not hereafter be made without specific legal authority."

The legislative counsel cited Section 4 (j) as the basis for its opoinion regarding the legality of the transfer. The portion of the law quoted follows:

"The corporation . . . shall determine its necessary expenditures under this act and the manner in which they shall be incurred, allowed, and paid, without regard to the provisions of any other law governing the expenditure of public funds."

The legislative counsel suggested: "To prevent recurrence in the future of action such as that taken by the HOLC, Congress might do either of two things. It could pass an act providing that no department or agency of the Government could, without specific authorization to do so, expend any funds for any such purpose as that for which the HOLC made the expenditure; or it could subject the expenditure by all departments and agencies of the Government to the scrutiny of the General Accounting Office, which apparently has a contrary opinion to that of the HOLC with respect to whether or not an expenditure such as that made by the HOLC is authorized by the provisions of the act under which the corporation operates.

"If the first alternative were adopted by Congress, it could then determine whether or not the HOLC should thereafter have authority to make an expenditure such as that in question, and should it decide in the affirmative, the necessary legislation conferring specific authority to make the expenditure could be enacted."

Senator McCarran indicated he was not ready to adopt either of the suggested remedies of the legislative counsel, but he stated that the inquiry had served to focus the attention of Congress on the danger of giving independent agencies blanket authority to spend money not specifically appropriated.

"The diversion by the HOLC may have been legally right," he said, "but it was morally wrong."

The HOLC expenditure, he added, showed the need for retaining the Comptroller General's office as a check against such diversions.

A transcript of the sub-committee hearings disclosed that officials of the HOLC were called upon to explain in detail the use of the money and the operations of the Group Health Association.

Despite the ruling of Controller General Elliott that the transfer of the $40,000 was illegal, the HOLC witnesses stated that the money had been contributed and much of it spent and they indicated there is no means now by which it may be recovered.

Raymond R. Zimmerman, director of personnel for the HOLC, told the sub-committee that the Group Health Association was started as a means of reducing the loss of time among employes from illness.

Zimmerman said the project has the support of "some of the more prominent physicians of the country," one of whom, Dr. Richard Cabot, of Harvard medical school, addressed the group.

Asked what the $40,000 was used for, Zimmerman said part of it went into the remodelling a building for use as a clinic at 1328 I street.

Union Proposes U. S. Schools to Train Seamen

N. M. U. to Offer Own Amendment at Congressional Hearing Tuesday.

Federal training schools for seamen, received with distrust by union heads when proposed by the United States Maritime Commission several weeks ago, have been embodied in a proposed amendment to the merchant marine act by the National Maritime Union, it was learned last night.

The amendment will be presented by Ralph Emerson, head of the Joint Maritime Legislative Committee, to joint hearings Tuesday of the Senate labor and commerce committees and to the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Four training schools for unlicensed seamen—one each on the Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific Coasts and on the Great Lakes—are proposed by the union through the joint committee, its legislative representative.

Hopes to Improve Discipline.

Emerson was one of a group of labor spokesmen invited yesterday by Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, to appear before the hearing. Patrick Whalen of the Baltimore Maritime Council, C. I. O. affiliate, and E. L. Oliver of Labor's Non-Partisan League, were the others.

Copeland said the Senate Commerce Committee hoped to "re-establish discipline on merchant ships" by labor amendments to the act. Confidential reports of Government officials, Copeland said, have confirmed "what we already had heard on lack of discipline."

"The masters of ships are no longer masters. When seamen's committees have taken over control of ships at sea, then discipline is lacking," he declared.

Disputes Must Stay Ashore.

"We are not opposed to labor unions, but we want all disputes and fighting confined to the shore," he added. "We might even go so far as saying there should be a closed shop, but disputes must not be carried to sea."

Meanwhile, a committee named to defend 14 seamen convicted of attempted revolt aboard the Government-owned freighter Algic asked intervention by President Roosevelt.

Appeal to President.

The "Algic Defense Committee," following a meeting last night in Baltimore, telegraphed to ask the President to use his "executive power to quash this vicious conviction when the appeals come before the District Court of Appeals at Charlotte, N. C., on January 20," the Associated Press reported.

Under the Maritime Union's seamen schools plan, direction would be by a board representing the commission and labor, preference in selection of students would be given seamen now serving on American ships and students would receive wages equal to the prevailing wage for American sailors.

"The ship owners are proposing that seamen be trained under the Coast Guard," Emerson commented. "The unions know what such training would mean . . . that before newly trained seamen ever set foot on the deck of a merchant vessel they would have been impregnated with an antilabor philosophy.

"The marine unions are as anxious as anyone to insure efficient, careful seamen, but safety at sea costs money and we can't expect the ship owners to go along with us on that."

Tom McCarthy

The Men In The Projection Booth.

"WAIT A MINUTE," he said. "Wait a minute, while I bring up that razz-berry."

Mr. Plunkett twisted the dial, and from the stage a mighty Bronx cheer roared out over the audience at Loew's Capital Theater.

"Nowadays," he said, "a projectionist has more to do than just set the film running. Here we have stage shows and we handle the spots for them, control the amplification from the stage and the screen, and even press the button which brings that microphone out of the floor at the front of the stage."

McCARTHY.

I went up to the projection room at the Capitol Theater to find out just what went on there during the course of a show. And Mr. Charles Plunkett, and his colleagues, J. H. Lehman and Otto Goldberg, demonstrat dethat they had their hands full. A projection man's job in a theater which also features vaudeville is sort of like a housewife's work, in that it's never done.

"We work three men on the stage show," Mr. Plunkett told me, "and two for the movies. And there's something doing all the time. Right now, I'm handling the amplification from that microphone on the stage. And the other two men over there are working the spots.

"In a minute or two that comedian is going to give the other fellow another Bronx cheer. And I'm the guy that makes it loud.

"You see on that stage 'mike' we have an automatic volume control, which won't let the voices get too loud. That's protection. But for this Bronx cheer we have to give it a little more power. It's funnier that way."

After Abbot and Costello, purveyors of humor and Bronx cheers, had disappeared from the stage, the spots picked up the solo dancer in one of the Hollywood Bandwagon Revue scenes.

"We have to follow her back and forth across the stage," Mr. Plunkett said, "not only with one spot, but with what we call a blend. We line up two spotlights so that they just overlap. Then we follow her so that she dances in just the overlapping edge of the lights.

* * * *

BESIDES blending spotlights for a particular effect, the men in the projection room get desired results through amazing range of color slides which they place before the light. They have more than 100 slides to choose from, and many of them are subtle variations of the same color. Blue is the most versatile of the colors, being represented in 20 different shades.

During the stage show the men in the projection room use their spotlights, utilizing dozens of various colors, according to cue sheets prepared before the first performance. Each colored light slide is numbered, and the directions on the cue sheet may read something like this: "Scene 2: 32, 16, until girls march from stairs, then 94 on singer."

After the stage show is over, the man working the odd shift, and called the "swing man" is dispensed with till later. Two men can run the machines projecting the movies.

* * * *

"IT'S a funny thing," Mr. Plunkett said, "but we rarely see a full movie, though we run them all week. Now this week, I'm showing part one and part three. Mr. Lehman is running part two and four."

"When part one is over, I change to part three. Then I go over and trim the spotlights for the next stage show. When I'm running my film, Lehman is changing his or fixing the spots and amplifiers in anticipation of the next show.

"And since we rarely trade machines all I'll see of this week's movie is the first and third part of it. And he'll only see about half of it, too. But 25 years of this work and you loose your curiosity as to what happens next.

"Why don't the talkies get out of gear like they used to? Well, in the early days of the talkies we used records. We'd start the record and the films at the same time. But if a bit of dust threw the needle off the record a bit, or even slowed it down, you'd have the horse saying the comedian's lines. And you couldn't do much about it.

"Now, however, the talking part of the picture is right on the film. It's sound film. It can't get ahead of the picture, or behind it.

"Why don't you see the end of the reel like you used to in the old days? Well, that's easy. We use two machines. At a certain point on the films there's a dot. That means it's time to get ready to switch machines.

"When the man showing part two sees the dot come up, he gives the signal for the man showing part three to get set and start his machine. When a second dot appears the man showing part three fades in while the other fades out. At that transition point the action on the film of both machines is the same.

"Do we ever go to a show on our day off? I'll say we don't!

New Year's Bill Is Held a Week At Shoreham

By Chanticleer

The New Year's Eve entertainment at the Shoreham has been held over for this wek. That means that the Blue Room at the Shoreham is featuring the same International Variety Show that made everybody happy New Year's Eve—at $10 per person. Only this week it doesn't cost anything except the price of dinner. As usual at the Shoreham, there is no extra cover charge for dinner guests remaining throughout the evening for dancing and entertainment.

The tapping comedians, Mirth and Mack, whom Rudy Vallee discovered and who are up to the usual Valee standards, are featured, along with the lovely McNallie Sisters, four of them, who sing and dance and are plenty good. Also, there is Myron Pearl Co. and Leon Leonidoff and Maxin Lowe's music, with Barnee directing.

There is a new and distinctly different song stylist appearing in the Mayflower Lounge with Sidney's orchestra. She is Betty Bryant, late of the Hotel Pierre and LaRue's, in New York City, and currently Hollywood bound. Billed as "chanteuse intime," Miss Bryant delights diplomats who frequent the Mayflower with popular and continental numbers sung in German, French, Italian or Hawaiian. She is a throaty-style singer, unlike any of the other vocalists who have been with Sidney during the present season.

It was at a private society party in Washington some weeks ago that Miss Bryant made her bow to Washington audiences. This was her first professional appearance.

At the Madrillon there is accent on good food. I am quoting Peter Borras, who says, "For nearly 18 years we have been in Washington catering to the tastes of native and foreign gourmets. That is the way we established our reputation and that is the way we will keep it. We serve today the choicest delicacies and the finest foods and have also as good a band as appears in Washington." Definite stuff that and a perfect setup for a pleasant evening. Nice atmosphere and good fun.

It has been taking a bit of hard work on the part of the boys and gals at the Mayfair to keep their spirits up since Jimmy Byrd went vacationing in Florida—but, to quote Otis Manning, Mayfair's half-pint magician, "Things are bad everywhere." I hear that their charming blonde accordion player, who delights with popular tunes, is starting to keep tally on the number of drinks she has turned down.

Pall Mall announces a brand new attraction beginning tonight—the glamorous Dolores DuPree in a repertoire of flashing Spanish dances. Eddie Daniels, leader of the Pall Mall Continental orchestra, provides specialties. Incidently he is an expert horseman and may be seen most any Sunday morning on Washington bridle paths. That second piano player of his just can't stop playing—during intermissions he regales the listeners with classical music.

Be on hand early for your place at the Bamboo Gardens this week for there is an All Star program featured. The Nine Continental Beauties, late from a local show house, headline the floor show. Then there is Bob Flinch back with more marionette performers, and Mary Jane Brown, the Carrolls, Audrey Hayes, the Dorsey sisters, and Lenora Thall to complete the show. Russ Cullen provides a colorful brand of swing music.

The Ambassador's Hi Hat cocktail lounge continues to delight customers. Helen Malcolm, the singing cigarette girl, and the Three Merrymakers provide smooth entertainment.

Maryland Fetes Seven Retiring From Faculty

University Staff Banquet Pays Homage to Former Instructors.

Seven retiring members of the faculty at the University of Maryland were honored last night at a banquet given in the dining hall by members of the university staff.

Millard E. Tydings, senior Senator from Maryland and graduate of the university, joined with Harry C. Byrd, president of the university, and T. H. Taliaferro, dean of the faculty, in praising the records of the seven members. They include:

Dr. H. J. Patterson, Dr. Henry B. McDonnell, Dr. A. N. Johnson, Dr. W. T. L. Taliaferro, Prof. Harry Gwinner, Prof C. J. Pierson and Prof. James T. Spann. Their retirement followed action of the State Legislature during its last session in expanding the State retirement law to include staff members of the university.

Dr. Patterson, dean of the College of Agriculture and director of the State Agricultural Station, had served on the faculty since 1888. He is past grand master of the State Grange, and for many years was director of the Maryland Farm Bureau. He will continue to serve in an advisory capacity with the Farm Bureau.

Dr. McDonnell, professor of agricultural chemistry, was dean of applied sciences from 1914 to 1929, when the School of Applied Sciences was absorbed in the College of Arts and Sciences. In recent years he has specialized in research on ozone. Dr. Johnson dean of the College of Engineering since 1920, was praised last night for his pioneer work in laying the foundation for the Maryland State Highway system as a member of the State Geological survey in 1898.

Dr. Talliaferro, professor of agriculture, was acting dean of the division of agriculture from 1915 to 1917, and for many years secretary-treasurer of the Maryland State Weather Service. He had also taught Latin and Greek literature.

Prof. Gwinner, professor of engineering and mathematics, joined the faculty in 1895. Prof. Pierson, member of the faculty since 1916, has been head of the department of zoology since 1921.

Virus Puzzle Is Explained to Veterinarians

Expert Declares Invisible Parasites Live in World of Their Own.

By the Associated Press.

Ithaca, N. Y., Jan. 6.—An explanation of the puzzle of viruses, as being invisible parasites forming a world of their own below the level of germs, was reported today at Cornell University by Dr. Richard E. Shope, of Rockefeller Institute.

Viruses cause infantile paralysis, influenza and many animal and plant diseases. Dr. Shope made his report to the thirteenth annual conference for veterinarians at the New York State Veterinary College.

He attained renown by discovering that the virus which caused the great flu outbreak near the end of the World War was nearly the same as the virus of swine influenza. That fact caused world-wide speculation whether the human epidemic came from swine.

Come in Three Sizes.

Viruses, he showed today, come in three sizes. One is extremely minute, not much bigger than molecules. Infantile paralysis and foot-and-mouth disease are in that size. There is a middle size, and a large one, the latter just below the visible germs.

But they are probably all, he said, parasites of a remarkable kind. They cannot survive without preying on living tissues, either human, animal or plant. The smallest are not complex enough to be really alive. They get inside living cells, and there combine with living elements so that they are able to do harm just like living germs. The latter are too big as a rule to get inside a living cell.

The two larger sizes of viruses are, Dr. Shope said, probably independently alive, although unable to survive away from their living "hosts."

Like the innumerable insect parasites, each of these viruses is suited only for causing damage in one species of living tissue. Thus flu virus needs the respiratory tract to live in. Infantile paralysis virus lives in the nerves.

Damage Is Varied.

The kinds of damage these invisible parasites do is as varied as the insect types. Some viruses, he said, stimulate cells, causing them to grow into tumors—and in one or two verified types in animals into cancer. Others destroy cells.

Where the viruses live between epidemics, Dr. Shope said, is an unsolved mystery. There are six distinct theories of this, but he declared it is likely epidemic viruses carry over in the bodies of men, animals and plants which have become immune.

It is, he went on, a fact that nearly all viruses confer lifelong immunity after they have once attacked a man or an animal. In this immunity, he concluded, lies the hope of medicine to combat the virus parasites.

SEC Aides Confer With Utility Men On Stock Issues

By the Associated Press.

Representatives of five major public utility holding companies have been conferring with officials of the Securities and Exchange Commission about registration under the holding company act, it was reported in commission circles yesterday.

Capital invested in the companies totals more than $3,000,000,000. One large system was "on the brink" of registration and others appeared to be approaching it, a commission official said.

Preliminary conferences between utility men and commission officials have been prompted by the approach of a Supreme Court decision on the registration provision of the holding company act of 1935. The court agreed Monday to review a test case brought by the Electric Bond and Share Co.

Labor Board Asks Ford Court Order

By the Associated Press.

The Labor Relations Board took the first step yesterday in what promises to be a prolonged court battle with the Ford Motor Co.

The board mailed to the Sixth Federal Circuit Court of Appeals at Covington, Ky., a petition for an order to enforce the board's recent decision against the Ford company.

Circuit court attaches in Covington said it probably would be several months before the court could consider the board's petition. Either the board or the Ford company may appeal to the Supreme Court from the circuit court's decision.

Allegany to Sell $8,000 Relief Loan

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 6 (AP).—Allegany County, beset by unemployment and lack of relief funds, turned today to loans to carry its relief load until spring.

The county agreed to borrow $8,000—two-thirds of the estimated needs. Towns in the county will borrow the other $4,000.

The money will be obtained under legislation enacted during the 1933 emergency and never repealed. It permits counties and towns to borrow amounts which will not cause a tax-rate increase of more than 8 cents on $100.

The plan of giving checks to needy persons will be abandoned and the loans will be used to buy food, clothing and fuel. Mayor Koon said he felt fewer persons would ask for commodities than had been asking for cash.

Federal Reserve Appoints Officials

New chief national bank examiners for the Twelfth and Sixth Federal Reserve Districts were appointed yesterday by J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency.

William Prentiss, jr., chief supervising receiver and First Deputy Comptroller of the Currency, was appointed to the Twelfth District, San Francisco. He is succeeded by Marshall R. Diggs, executive assistant to the Comptroller of the Currency in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Gibbs Lyons, deputy comptroller, was appointed to the Sixth District Atlanta. He succeeds Ellis D. Robb, retired. Lyons is succeeded by Goodwin J. Oppegard, assistant general counsel for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Two Robbers Kill Policeman in N.Y.; 3d Suspect Is Hurt

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 6.—Forty detectives were on the trail of two armed men who held up a Manhattan restaurant today and killed Patrolman Frank E. Zaccor, 39.

A young man who was shot by the policeman while acting, allegedly, as the robbers' lookout, lay dying in Bellevue Hospital, defiantly giving false clews and refusing to disclose real names.

The wounded man, Thomas Kirwin, 21, insisted, "I'm not sorry for what I have done."

Teachers' Groups Back Vote on War

Indorsement of the Ludlow war referendum amendment to the Constitution by the National Education Association and the American Federation of Teachers was announced here last night by the National Committee for the War Referendum. The former was said to represent 200,000, the latter 30,000, teachers.

In the House, Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, insisted that the Ludlow war referendum be considered because it "would sow the seeds of precedent in the minds of peoples abroad whether they be Italians, Germans or Russians."

Rubber Check Artist Sought in Washington

An imposter, using the name of "Thomas Fortune Ryan III," was being sought last night by police on several charges of passing bad checks.

Metropolitan police said Baltimore authorities reported the bad check artist had left there hurriedly yesterday morning and was believed headed this way. They say he has a long record of bad checks, and is no relation to the prominent and wealthy New York family whose name he has assumed.

Jackson Flays Business Anew; Willkie Replies

Debate

The Town Hall officials carefully characterized the joint Jackson-Willkie appearance as "not a debate!" nevertheless, it had all the color of one.

Both Cite Auto Industry.

Both speakers cited the automobile industry to prove points, Willkie to bolster his contention that high wages and low prices had been a product of big business, Jackson in support of his view that competition was a requisite for "serving the public with an abundance of goods at prices it can afford to pay."

In the course of his speech, Willkie also used the Washington (D. C.) area electric rates in illustration of his views.

Jackson, saying American private business never had been "continuously self-sustaining," but always had "operated under concealed subsidies," asserted the Government had tried last year to "cooperate with the business demand to get out of Government spending."

"And," he added, "the problem has come back to it with increased intensity."

The "essential first step" toward recovery, he said, is for "big business deliberately and speedily to go to a policy of high-volume production, low price and the highest wage scale possible . . . We must have more goods for more people at less cost."

Would Make System Work.

"We have no present substitute for a system of private enterprise motivated by private profit, whatever its defects," he declared. "To my practical mind, our job is to make the system that is here work. It will take all the strength and intelligence of both business and Government to make it work under existing foreign and domestic stresses."

"Private enterprise is in a situation where chiefly its own workers are its customers, and its customers its own workers. Unless it can keep the circle of goods and wages moving, then the Government directly and brazenly must fill the gap in employment on one hand, and the needs for goods on the other.

"We are right-out in the open with sheer naked taxes on private enterprise for cash relief. That system can grow to—heaven knows what!"

Calls Laws "Archaic."

Jackson referred to present anti-trust laws as "archaic," and said at another point:

"I hope to see antimonopoly laws enacted that will be adequate to throw the power of organized Government back of those businesses which are pursuing a policy of serving the public with an abundance of goods at prices it can afford to pay."

After citing his formula for progress, he said:

"Regardless of any consequences, I am ready to go down the line to co-operate with anyone to foster this kind of American life, and just as ready to go down the line against anyone who would destroy this kind of American life."

"Ironical," He Says.

Of the Jackson theory of low prices, big sales, high wages, Willkie had this to say:

". . . It seems a little ironical for Government officials to be lecturing big business on the desirability of low prices and large volume because this was a technique which was developed and made possible only by mass production and distribution under the leadership of big business."

He added that President Roosevelt's "last speeches" had had a "friendlier tone," saying:

"I hope that at last we can have done with the epithets, the calling of names, the catchwords . . . such as economic royalists, Bourbons, moneyed aristocrats, banker-control holding companies, and the nonsense about 60 ruling families.

"Today we are very much in need of analysis without catchwords.

"I suggest that we have now reached the time when we should stop discussing who caused the depression and should direct our attention to how to cure it.

"The real cure consists in convincing the millions of small investors throughout America that the Government does not intend to continue its attack on American industry, big or little, for it is these investors upon whom industry depends for its funds.

"* * * for several years, the government has taken definite action to show its hostility to business. It must now take definite action to demonstrate the sincerity of its desire to co-operate."

Business and government, he went on, "should put an end to the bitterness of recent years and sit down in conference like reasonable men," to "plan intelligently for the future," and also to "review those laws which have been passed to see whether they cannot be so modified as to stimulate business activity without removing any of the appropriate social controls."

Jackson, calling "big business opposition" to Administration social and economic measures "as short-sighted as suicide," said the people "expect" business to "furnish steady jobs for all who want to work," and added that if industry did not, "the people are determined to provide it for themselves through their government."

Willkie's reference to Washington area rates was as follows:

"Mr. Jackson lives in Washington, D. C., which gets its electricity from one of the companies in the great North American system. A few miles away, operating under identical conditions, is one of the independent companies. The average rate for electric service in the Washington homes is 3 cents per kilowatt hour. The average rate for this same service in the independent company's territory is 4 cents, or 33 1-3 per cent higher.

"Because of the low rate of the holding company utility, the home owners of Washington save approximately one and one-half million dollars per year in their electric bills. Which is worth more to the people of that city—a saving of one and a half million dollars on the electricity they use, or the acceptance of a political formula, which decrees that mere size is wrong even though it saves money for the people?"

Willkie Repudiates Spies.

By the United Press.

As soon as the two finished their speeches, people all over the hall popped out of their seats, eager to ask questions.

"Mr. Willkie," shouted a woman in the balcony, "is big business or small business more likely to hire labor spies?"

"I never have hired a labor spy," Willkie replied, "and I repudiate the practice no matter whether big or little business does it."

The next question was addressed to Jackson:

"Don't we fear concentration of government as much as concentration of business?"

"The American people," Jackson said, "wouldn't have to concentrate power in government if they didn't need it to break up the concentration of power in business."

"Is it the purpose of the New Deal to nationalize public utilities?" someone yelled.

Ickes to Renew Attack.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes indicated strongly yesterday he will renew his assault on private concentration of wealth in a Jackson Day speech at Nashville, Tenn., Saturday night.

The main theme of his speech, he said, will be the story of Andrew Jackson's fight with the Bank of the United States. "It will be another aspect of my December 30 speech," he added. In response to inquiries at his press conference yesterday Ickes said he was fighting a "lawless small minority" of "people who violate the law."

Boy Actors Start Dog 'Parking Lot'

One of the most exclusive kennel "parking lots" in America has been started by two boys in back of a small frame building at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios.

The founder members are Freddie Bartholomew and Ronald Sinclair, and they have picked the site to "park" their two dogs while they are busy with school lessons.

Freddie has a spaniel he calls Conkol, while Ronnie recently acquired a Boston bulldog named Bingo. Any other members of the school who want to park their dogs in the improvised kennel have to apply to the boy actors.

Navy Bomber Missing With Seven

Embassy Aide Files Report on PanayBombing

J. Hall Paxton 'Wouldn't Have Missed Attack for Anything.'

Glad to have been a participant, but hopeful he'll never have to go through the same thing again, J. Hall Paxton, Second Secretary of the American Embassy in Nanking, flew to the Capital yesterday to report to the State Department on the bombing of the Panay.

"There was complete order because there was no sense in having panic when you already thought you were gone," he said upon arrival at Washington Airport.

While he would not have missed the experience "for anything in the world," he was just as emphatic in wishing for no recurrence of the epochal incident. Paxton now is on 60 days' leave of absence from his diplomatic duties.

He asserted he did not actually see the machine-gunning of the small boats as they took survivors from the stricken gunboat to the shore, but said he was certain the assaults had occurred.

Paton declared a number of men who had not been wounded before were struck by projectiles during the passage from the ship to the bank of the Yangtze.

dio," she declared. "Naturally, I was very much worried, but I never doubted the truth of the report for an instant." Mrs. Hughes said she immediately communicated with the Navy Department for details of the attack and then went to New York to await further information.

"I have heard from my husband by radio and dictated letter," she said yesterday. "He seems to be making a satisfactory recovery, but it will be a long time before he is entirely well again. When he's strong enough, he will probably be sent to the Philippines to recuperate." Mrs. Hughes said she had made no plans for joining her husband.

Expressing a sentimental attachment for the Panay, Mrs. Hughes said "I knew every rivet of it." Her husband took command of the gunboat in the summer of 1936 and was normally stationed at Yangtze River ports for three months at a time. "We had just spent the summer at Chungking, head of navigation 1,300 miles up the river," Mrs. Hughes said, "when the ship was ordered down stream. I followed on a river boat. At Hankow, when orders came to leave China, I started overland for Canton and home.

"Wherever there was an American flag, we felt secure," Mrs. Hughes declared. "Before the Panay was sunk, people kept telling me all the time that my husband couldn't be in a safer place."

Mrs. Hughes, who was well acquainted with all the ship's officers and their families, said she thought "officers and crew did wonderful work" when the Panay was attacked.

Reluctant to speak of her three-day rail journey from Hankow to Canton, Mrs. Hughes admitted that an aerial bomb had struck one car of her train. "It was really nothing," she insisted. At Canton, "I could see bombs dropping on the native quarter, but I wasn't worried about my own safety."

At Hongkong, Mrs. Hughes found a cholera epidemic raging, and then a typhoon struck the city, delaying her ship two days.

Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Hughes were married at the Church of the Covenant by the Rev. Albert J. McCartney on May 19, 1936. The former Katherine Brown, she attended Potomac School and Miss Madiera's School, in Washington, and then studied for a year in Paris. Her father, Col. Brown, is president of the Terminal Refrigerating & Warehousing Corporation.

Japanese Push At Rail Route To Inner China

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Friday), Jan. 7.—Japanese forces estimated at 60,000 were reported today to be thrusting from the north and south at the Lunghai railroad—China's "jugular vein."

Control of that main east-west trunk line would open the way for a Japanese drive into the interior and against China's provisional capital, Hankow.

Thirty planes heavily bombed airfields at Hankow and Wuchang. Fifty Chinese noncombatants were killed or wounded.

Other developments included reopening of the United States Embassy at Nanking and issuance of a statement by the Japanese government that China had shown "increasing evidence" of an intention to seek peace.

South Invasion Delayed.

Canton, China, Jan. 6 (Via Shanghai, U.P.).—The Japanese invasion of south China, which was scheduled for late December or early January has been postponed because of unforeseen developments in the Far Eastern conflict, it was learned today. Japan's fear of spreading her forces over too wide a territory in China and the necessity for strengthening Japanese Manchukuo forces have contributed to the delay.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Tickets for 'Between the Devil,' at the National, Will Go on Sale at Box-Office on Monday Morning

Prices for Inaugural Event of President's Birthday Celebrations Will Range From $1 to $5; Beatrice Lillie Wants to Appear; Hurricane Insurance for 'Hurricane;' Dr. Mann Throws a Party; the Postman Keeps Busy; Notes of the Theater and People.

SO NOW the rush should start.

Tickets will go on sale Monday morning at the National Theater box-office for the special performance of the musical hit, "Between the Devil," to be presented in Washington for one performance only on Sunday evening, January 23, as the inaugural event of a series of gay revels planned for the President's Birthday celebrations, in behalf of the Warm Springs Foundation Fund for the combat of infantile paralysis.

BELL.

For this "command performance"—and that is by no means what it is; rather a friendly gesture by Producer Lee Shubert and the stars, cast and artisans of the production—the entire "Between the Devil" company is being brought from the Imperial Theater, in New York, to the National at a staggering cost, as such things go in "show business."

The scale of prices for this gala evening in the theater—and it is worth noting that the National Capital this season has not as yet had a musical comedy as a regular booking—will range from $1 to $5. The entire orchestra floor will be tariffed at the top price. The first six rows of the first balcony will be $3; the next six rows—and that is all there are—will be $2 per seat. The second balcony will be scaled at the at price of $1 per seat location.

Three English stars—Jack Buchanan, Evelyn Laye, a Washington favorite, and Adele Dixon—head the cast of this new Dietz-Schwartz musical fol-de-rol, which also enlists the services of an imposing number of associate players and specialists.

"Between the Devil" represents one of the amusement bargains of the year—or should—in the estimation of a populace that has been "starved" in the matter of musical divertissement this year.

• • • •

It is being bruited about in the so-called upper circles that Beatrice Lillie, the contemporary stage's pre-eminent feminine clown, having heard of this charitable enterprise and friendly Shubert gesture, has expressed a deep wish to be included among the artistes contributing to its distinction. It has been suggested that she join her compatriots in the cast of "Between the Devil" in some special role, written into the script for this special occasion. That is a consummation devoutly to be wished. And it may come true. You know how "Bee" Lillie is when she gets her mind set on something!

• • • •

We have told you, from time to time, of the fury that manifests itself in the storm sequences of "The Hurricane," the Samuel Goldwyn picturization of the story by Charles Nordhoff and James Normal Hall, opening at the Palace today. It is something that really deserves the descriptive word, overworked as it is, of "colossal." The impression seems to have permeated the consciousness of the Palace management.

According to announcement just reaching this desk, the Travelers Fire Insurance Co. has issued a policy to the Palace, safeguarding it against any cyclonic visitation that might befall the Loew house during the period of the run of the picture. The indemnatory clause of the contract runs to the tune of $100,000.

While the Weather Man is not too specifically in on this, it seems that there have been storms of major proportions at about this time of year in the past. The Palace has taken its precautions against any likelihood of a repetition of the brutal assaults of the elements recorded back in days of the late nineteen-teens and 1933.

It probably doesn't mean a thing, but out of such items grow a bunch of paragraphs like these.

Without benefit of big tops, pink lemonade or blaring bands, Dr. William Mann, curator of the National Zoological Gardens, yesterday was host at a party in the Zoo, tossed in honor of Sir Cedric Hardwicke, appearing this week as star of "Shadow and Substance," at the National Theater. Sir Cedric happens to be president of the British organization of circus fans that corresponds to the association presided over in this country with such tan-bark acumen by Mr. Melvin D. Hildreth, well-known Washington barrister and the circus' walking encyclopedia in the Capital. A pleasant time is reported to have been had by all—including the pampered animals that Dr. Mann has assembled from all points of the globe, not meaning, of course, either Sir Cedric or Mr. Hildreth.

"Dear Mr. Bell: 'Auditioning' ballet, indeed! You should make it your business. These days tap-dancing is auditioned; most of it comes to us via radio. But the ballet! I agree heartily.

"Still Miss Gardiner is simply using the current jargon. And, of course, the modes in misuse must be followed, as you admit in writing that Mr. Mitchell has 'authored' several successful plays.

"I was impressed by 'impressario' (composing-room?) even applied to Col. Lake, and why—oh, why, Mr. Bell?—Toomai and the Elephants'?

"And I enjoy your column. Sincerely, (Signed) D. D. L. McGREW."

Well, after all, what is an occasional "s," or an "and" instead of an "of"—if that is what it should have been—among friends? Anyhow it's nice to be read and thanks for that last line.

The next time the blue-clad Farley emissary rang, it was to leave a letter from Senator Arthur Capper that conveys sentiments a little too flattering to bear repetition here. The Senator imposes upon this department a rather large order which it will endeavor to discharge to the best of its feeble abilities at the earliest possible moment. It has to do with the ten most impressive stage productions this column ever has encountered in the theater and their stars. The thinking cap is on!

• • • •

As long as the U. S. Mails seem to be supplying a considerable proportion of today's column, this might be as good a time as any to record that Mr. Jerome G. Sacks, writes from the Catholic University to point out an anachronism in "The Last Gangster," starring Edward G. Robinson in one of his best performances in this dubious hoodlum bracket.

Mr. Sacks is annoyed that Mr. Robinson, in the role of Joe Krozac, should have been convicted of an income tax evasion and sentenced to Alcatraz Island somewhere during the years of 1927 or 1928. His objection is founded on the fact that "The Rock" was not made a U. S. prison until 1934.

"It is easily understandable," says Mr. Sacks, "that the producers wanted to romanticize the story by having this prison as part of the background, and the shots within the penitentiary were fairly technically correct. But it is very disconcerting to us who are engaged in the study of penology to have historic data in that field shoved around for the convenience of an overenergetic director. This error, intentional or otherwise, ruined a good motion picture."

"Ruined," Mr. Sacks?

And still they come. A note from Barnee, nee Barnett Breeskin, brings word that again he has been selected to conduct at the annual Jewish Student Loan Fund Ball, at the Raleigh Hotel, Sunday evening, January 16. This is a benefit affair, the proceeds of which are devoted to loans to needy Jewish students to enable them to complete their educations. It is highly appropriate that so worthy a cause should be able to command the services of so able a young musical director. "Barnee" comes by his talent naturally. He is the son of Daniel Breeskin, one of the Capital's pioneer motion picture orchestra directors, and the nephew of Elias Breeskin, not so long ago rated among the ten violin virtuosi appearing on the American concert stage.

Shaggy Stars of Current Films

TWO WHO BEARD DRAMA IN ITS DEN.

With primitive drama holding sway on the screens of Washington this week, it is interesting to note in what manner two of the outstanding players meet the requirements of their roles in the matter of appearance. Above, at left, is Bob Burns, famous comedian and Post columnist, as he appears in the role of Hank York, plainsman, in "Wells Fargo," opening today at the Earle. Right, Thomas Mitchell, in the role of the tippling doctor in "The Hurricane," at Loew's Palace. "The Bad Man of Brimstone," at the Capitol, also is "rough."

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, January 6.—Everywhere I go in Hollywood, I hear a chorus of wails from the producers about the constantly mounting costs of production. Star salaries are going up, set costs are soaring, this is skyrocketing, that is climbing. In spite of the fact that most studios showed a mighty fat profit last year, the men who hold the purse strings are predicting disaster. And if it comes, it will be the result of their own folly.

SONJA HENIE

• • • •

The competition in this business is too keen—and too unscrupulous. Studios make a business of stealing one another's stars. They even fight for the services of little unknowns who have not more than one chance in a thousand of ever becoming box-office attractions. If Joe Zilch offers Mary Pretty $250 a week, Sam Glotz is sure to bid $500 if she will jump her contract—and when she does, Ben Whoosis manages to let her know that he will pay $1,000 if she will walk out on Glotz. In any other business such tactics would be considered suicidal—and it seems to me that they are suicidal in Hollywood. Once the salaries go up, they stay up, for girls like Mary cannot take a cut without sacrificing "face."

• • • •

And I wish that the Zilches and Glotzes who throw $1,000 pay checks around to untried ingenues so recklessly would quit crabbing about the pennies paid the workmen on the set.

• • • •

Mention foreign imports, and any Hollywood conversation, just now, immediately swings to Hedy Keissler—and one of the most amusing situations in Filmville's hectic history. Hedy is a real beauty and a great actress, but, as I think I told you the other day, she made the mistake of starring in a European opus entitled "Ecstasy." M-G-M, having contracted to pay Miss Keissler a small fortune each week, renamed her Hedy Lamarr and prayed that her connection with that unfortunate picture would be forgotten, for "Ecstasy" is much, much too daring to suit the average American moralist. But alas, the meanies who own the picture saw a chance to clean up and hardly had the newspapers announced the signing of Metro's new star than "Ecstasy" was reissued and pounced upon by every theater owner who could get away with it. For the first time in Hollywood annals, the executives of a movie studio are grateful for censorship—"Ecstasy" will be banned in almost all of the 48 States and 268 cities which maintain Boards of Review.

• • • •

Ever since the release of "A Star Is Born," my mail has been filled with letters demanding more all-color pictures. "Why," they ask, "do Hollywood producers go on making pictures in black and white when color has been so well received and is so much better? The answer is simple. All-color pictures are a luxury that studios can afford only occasionally. Color film costs several times as much as black and white. Its use adds expensive weeks to the production schedule. And the cost of lighting the sets, never a small item, is doubled because of the extra illumination needed for the color cameras.

A great many stories have been written in Hollywood gossip columns about Sonja Henie's thrift and greed for money. But here is the other side of the brief. A few days ago, a jewelry salesman called to see Sonja on the set. She examined his wares and fell so completely in love with three diamond bracelets that she could not choose among them. So she summoned Marguerite Royce, her wardrobe girl, and asked her opinion. Marguerite liked one certain bracelet—and went into such ecstasies of admiration that Sonja, giving way to a sudden impulse, bought it and, then and there, presented it to Marguerite. Then she turned to the jeweler. "I'm sorry," she said. "I will not be able to afford anything else today."

Capital Listed Among Leaders Of Film World

Box-Office Depression Is Current Bugaboo of the Picture Industry.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Jan. 6.—It begins to look as though the day of the $2,000,000 super-super feature, like "Wells Fargo," "Rosalie," and "Hurricane" and many another during the last few months, is about over—at least until folks start filling up the movie houses again.

With few exceptions theaters across the land here lately have had more empty seats than full. With results which only now are beginning to show up on the ledgers of the movie makers, and they're taking steps.

Paramount and M-G-M have cut what they call the deadwood from their forces. Numerous writing-less writers have had their walking papers. Receivers for R-K-O are in town, trying to figure ways to whittle down the overhead.

Studios Are Inactive.

Several studios, including Samuel Goldwyn's, Walter Wanger's and David O. Selznick's, are closed tight, although they have announced big plans for the future. The doors of B. P. Schulberg's studio arelocked. Grand National has been quiet for weeks, but will start shooting in the next few days. There has been a shakeup with resultant lowered costs at Universal.

Tomorrow the heads of Warner Brothers First National will gather for a week of making plans to thwart what seems to be a new depression in the entertainment field. Their decisions cannot be announced beforehand, of course, but they can be predicted on the basis of a conversation we had with one of them today.

"We've made our share of big and costly pictures this year," he said. "We still haven't released 'Gold is Where You Find It,' and we're still shooting 'Robin Hood,' which is going to cost us at least $2,000,000.

"The question now is whether we can continue to make this kind of film, or whether we must concentrate on cheaply made ones.

Washington On Top.

"Our trouble is not only national, it is international. With wars in Europe and the Far East, many a theater which used to display our product is closed. Other non-warring nations are increasing their quota restrictions, with resultant contraction of our receipts.

"Not only does there seem to be a falling off in theater audiences in this country, but part of this falling off seems to be the industry's own fault. I'm talking about the double feature. We used to regard it as an evil to be avoided. Now it's an actuality, and what are we going to do about it?"

Only in parts of the South, in Washington, D. C., and a few other isolated communities are single features, augmented by the old-fashioned comedies, travelogues and newsreels being shown, he said.

"And you'd be surprised," he continued, "to learn that in these cities the movie business is far better than it is in Chicago, St. Louis, Los Angeles and other centers, where twin features are sending audiences, groggy, out of the theaters."

Allen's Memory HollywoodWonder

If you see a far-away look in Fred Allen's eye, you can put it down to the fact that he is doing one of Hollywood's most difficult memory feats.

The noted radio and screen comic has had to memorize 50 solid pages of dialogue for his co-starring role with Alice Faye in "Sally, Irene and Mary."

And in between scenes he must put these lines out of his mind while he writes his hour radio broadcast—practically all of which he creates himself. Since his radio show goes on once a week, he is one of the film city's busiest men.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Jan. 6.

WHILE ENGLAND is preparing to counteract Italy's anti-British propaganda broadcasts to Africa, and politicians are beginning to realize the possibilities of amateur radio, a new form of propaganda is being brought to the attention of these radio "hams." . . . On page 66 of the magazine QST, devoted entirely to amateur radio, is an ad by a radio-tube manufacturer. A sample newspaper called Sun is reproduced. And under the headline "Good News" appear tiny letters which seem to be a mere jumble—until read under a magnifying glass. If any radio operator studies these lines he'll read two news items. The first, date-lined Boston, is: "All the poor in this city can go take a flying jump in the ocean." The second, date-lined Washington, begins: "The g——d—— President of these United States."

• • • •

NEGOTIATIONS NOW are being made for Beatrice Lillie to sing her "Rhythm" burlesque and do the commentating at the Carnegie Hall concert to be given by Benny Goodman . . . Prescott van Wyck, descendant of the first mayor of New York, who now is pressing bigamy charges against Lolita Cordoba, will open a La Conga cafe in Boston . . . Goldwyn has purchased the movie rights to Elmer Rice's book, "Imperial City."

• • • •

ERNEST HEMINGWAY received a transatlantic phone call in Madrid from a friend who urged: "Go to Barcelona and look at the sights en route. It'll do you good. Go to Barcelona. You shouldn't stay in Madrid. Your heart'll feel much lighter if you look at the sights on the way to Barcelona." . . . After five minutes of this, Hemingway got the idea—which escaped the censor listening in. That's how he first heard the news—that Teruel had fallen—and once more was loyalist.

• • • •

THEODORE GRANIK, who was secretary to former Dist. Atty. Dodge, is in Washington now as special counsel to the United States Housing Administration . . . Lawrence Tibbett and Burgess Meredith are organizing a Federal arts committee to work for the establishment of a bureau of fine arts in the Federal Government . . . The Mercury Theater group, whose anti-Fascist "Julius Caesar" is one of the town's major hits, celebrated with a backstage party Monday night and permitted but one reactionary touch—real champagne was served. Entertainment was provided by Composer Marc Blitzstein's father, a former banker who makes music with knives.

• • • •

ELLIOT PAUL, author of "Life and Death of a Spanish Town," returned from Europe last week, after the newspapers had reported that his mission there was to visit Spain. When Paul returned the customs officials decided that he probably was bringing in some inflammatory propaganda. They searched his baggage carefully for valuable state papers—and paid no heed at all to six bottles of rare Calvados and four bottles of Armagnac . . . As a matter of truth, Paul really went to Paris—to find a governess for his wife's child.

• • • •

GERMANY, which has a pact with Japan, has been unable to recall its army officers who have been training the Chinese—because these officers are non-Aryan . . . "Right This Way," the musical, already has cost the producer $150,000 . . . To add to the mixup, Dance Director Wally Wanger, who is being sued by Movie Producer Walter Wanger for using a similar name, bought his business from Jack Pomeroy, who now works for Walter Wanger . . . The closing notice is up at the Theater Guild's "Wine of Choice," now in Philadelphia.

SAM GOLDWYN, after studying the fashion magazines, noticed that Jock Whitney and other sportsmen wore caps. He therefore went to Oviatt's, bought the most elegant supply of caps, and on the trip to New York and on the boat to London wore a different cap every day . . . In London he met George Bernard Shaw at a tea, cornered him, and said: "Nobody but me must make your plays into movies." . . . "In Hollywood nobody knows how to adapt my plays," Shaw replied. "I can't understand you producers. You're like a man who goes into the finest hat store, spends days going over the best hats, of the finest texture, tries and discards hundreds until he finds one that is right. Then he throws it on the floor, jumps on it again and again, picks it up, puts it on, looks at himself in the mirror and says, 'Ah—that's me.'" . . . "But Mr. Shaw," Goldwyn knowingly protested, "I—I wear a cap!"

• • • •

GREGORY RATOFF confided to a reporter: "H'I em an Honorary Interpreter of the Puort, at Jacksonweel. H'I hev a beek blue reebon to pruv dot." . . . "I don't understand, Mr. Interpreter," the reporter returned. "Will you interpret that for me?" . . . "Ov cuss," Ratoff replied, and drew from his pocket a blue ribbon marked "Honorary Interpreter of the Port, Jacksonville."

An Unborn Babe Is Cast in Film

Most unusual casting in Hollywood history is that of a tiny tot, not yet of this world, who will portray the new-born Louis Charles, Dauphin of France, in "Marie Antoinette," starring Norma Shearer.

The historically dramatic scene of the Dauphin's birth, scheduled for filming in mid-January, has been made elastic by Director Sidney Franklin to coincide with the arrival of the baby selected for the part.

The baby will have only "one take" in the picture, as it is being carried on a golden cushion for presentation to the French people.

The infant, which will weigh no more than a few pounds, is to carry the lengthiest of titles, Dauphin of France and of Bourbon, Duke of Normandie, Most Christian Prince of Navarre, Count of Burgundy, Lord of the Dauphine, of Montmorency, of Cambrai, of Amiens, of Chartres; Chevalier of the Most Sacred Order of the Holy Ghost, Heir of Divine Right to the Throne of the Realm of France.

Cummings Signed To Direct Temple

Signing of Director Irving Cummings to a new long-term contract, and his assignment to do another Shirley Temple picture has been announced by Darrly F. Zanuck.

Cummings is the man who directed Shirley's biggest money-earning picture, the highly successful "Poor Little Rich Girl." His new picture with Shirley, which will be the first under the new contract, will be "Little Miss of Broadway."

Cummings' new contract brings him back to the Twentieth Century-Fox studio after an absence of nearly a year spent at other Hollywood film plants.

Penalty Taxes Are Voted Upon 'Closed' Firms

Tax

would be exempted from the "third basket" penalty taxation—corporations not closely held, corporations with net incomes of less than $50,000, and corporations that distribute 60 per cent of their earnings.

Definitions Listed.

"Closely held corporations," earning more than $50,000 and distributing less than 60 per cent of their incomes, would be narrowed to the following definitions, affected by the penalty tax:

One person or members of one family who own more than 50 per cent of the value of stock in a corporation.

Corporations where two persons without family connections own as much as 53 per cent of the stock; where three persons own 56 per cent of the stock; four persons, 59 per cent; five persons, 62 percent; six persons, 65 per cent; seven persons, 68 per cent; eight persons, 71 per cent; nine persons, 74 per cent, and ten persons, 75 per cent.

Computation Explained.

Taxes on earnings of corporations falling within these two categories would be computed by permitting exemption from the "penalty" tax of $40,000, or 30 per cent of the adjusted net income, whichever is greater. Then a flat 20 per cent tax would be levied upon the earnings retained by these corporations.

The net effect would be a tax only slightly less drastic than the force of the present undivided profits tax. Citing for example a closely-held corporation with a net income of $100,000, which retained all of its earnings. Vinson explained it would have to pay the new normal 20 per cent undivided profits tax of $20,000. From the $80,000 remaining, $40,000 could be retained on which no tax is paid. The penalty tax of 20 per cent would be applied to the remaining $40,000.

"The effective rate under this plan would be on total retentions just slightly less than the rate under the present law," he said.

Another Example Given.

Using another example, he said a corporation with an income of $1,000,000, on a basis of total retention, would pay a rate of 31.2 per cent under the new plan, compared with 32.3 under existing law. If 50 per cent of the earnings were distributed the tax rate would be 19.4 per cent.

The great bulk of corporations however—not closely held—would pay taxes under the more moderate schedules agreed to recently. Corporations earning less than $25,000 would pay 12½ per cent on the first $5,000; 14 per cent on the next $15,000, and 15 per cent on the next $5,000.

Corporations earning over $25,000 (outside the closely held category), would pay an undivided profits tax of from 16 to 20 per cent, graduated according to the income distributed.

Approval of the new penalty tax feature followed a request by the President, near the closing days of the last session, that the committee tighten provisions of the present law affecting "improper" accumulation of corporate surpluses to avoid payment of individual surtaxes.

Yesterday's action virtually wound up sub-committee work on a bill which also undertook to "smooth out" application of the capital gains tax to encourage movement of capital. Vinson, who estimates the bill will yield virtually the same revenue as present law, hopes to be ready for a report to the full Ways and Means Committee by the middle of next week.

Public hearings then will be held by the Ways and Means Committee before the bill is reported to the House, probably about February 1. A fight on the new penalty tax features may develop in the full committee. All of the Republicans are opposed to the levy, but all of the Democrats are not for it.

Lamneck Denies Power.

Lamneck, for one, told the House yesterday that "we have no power to use the taxing power as a penalty such as is intended in this legislation directed at Mr. Ford and others, and as was intended in other legislation, such as the Guffey bill."

"Our taxing power is almost unlimited," he said, "for the purpose of conducting the affairs of Government as provided in the Constitution, but we are decidedly limited when we use the taxing power for purposes other than Government under the Constitution."

Lamneck said the undivided profits tax should be repealed and there should be substituted a definite levy against corporate earnings beginning at 12 per cent for corporations earning not over $25,000, and a maximum of 16 per cent for those earning above that.

Calls Ford "Good Citizen."

Referring to the new plan affecting closely held corporations, Lamneck said Ford had been a "good citizen" in providing work for thousands of persons at good wages, and asked "just why Henry Ford should be made the goat of this and other taxes by the Administration." He said the Administration "started after him in the NRA days."

"It has aided and abetted labor organizations that have tried to disrupt his satisfactory relations with his men," he said. "Mr. Ickes, in his inspired air address, attacked Mr. Ford as a wicked law violator. Now, in keeping with past performances, a plan is on foot to harass Mr. Ford with a special type of taxation.'

At yesterday's meeting of the House tax sub-committee, the group decided by a vote of 6 to 2 to sidetrack proposals to require joint returns by husband and wife in eight community property tax States, and to defer revision of depletion allowances on properties of oil and mining companies.

Letters Describe How Love Cooled In Triangle Case

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Jan. 8.—Counsel for Paul A. Wright in the "triangle" slaying of his wife and "best friend" threatened contempt action against District Attorney Buron Fitts today after the publication of letters in which Mrs. Wright told how her husband's love had cooled.

A continuance may be asked when Wright is called for trial next Thursday, Defense Attorney Jerry Giesler said, if it seems then the public has been swayed against Wright by a "highly prejudicial" act.

Giesler referred to the public release of letters written by Wright's young wife, Evelyn, to her parents in the year before he killed her and his "best friend," John Kimmel, last November 9 at the Wright home.

The letters told of marital and financial difficulties and a temporary separation.

Sweets to Gable From His Fans

By the apperance of one present received by Clark Gable, it might be conjectured that he has the world's largest sweet tooth.

It was a huge crate of sweets.

The gift delivered on the "Test Pilot" set, came from Gable's fan club, with 1,000 members, in Winnipeg, Manitoba. Each club member donated one home-made gift—in each case, candy, fudge or cake.

Birthday of Roosevelt Georgia Legal Holiday

Atlanta, Jan. 6 (AP).—The birthday of President Franklin D. Roosevelt was proclaimed today as a legal holiday in Georgia by Gov. E. D. Rivers at the request of the Legislature.

The proclamation sets out that when Mr. Roosevelt's anniversary falls on Sunday, as it does this year, the holiday shall be the preceding day, January 29. Gov. Rivers urged citizens to celebrate this year by attending the balls, proceeds of which are used to combat infantile paralysis.

The Item Veto.

President Roosevelt's indorsement of the item veto, applied to appropriation bills, arouses hope that this constructive reform may at last emerge from the mere discussion stage. In many of the States the item veto has become an established and important weapon of defense against wasteful and unwise expenditures. In the hands of a conscientious President it would prove even more useful.

Many expensive items are incorporated with Federal appropriation bills every year by the log-rolling method. Congressmen are able to obtain support for "pet" projects by promising to help other legislators in similar ventures. Frequently this procedure results in damaging raids on the Treasury. While the President may vigorously disapprove such tactics, he now has no power to interfere, except by the impractical method of vetoing entire appropriation bills.

Under Senator Vandenberg's proposed amendment to the Constitution, which the President appears to have tacitly indorsed, it would be possible for the Executive to strike out individual items in appropriation bills without sending the entire measures back to Congress. The result would be to expose each proposed expenditure to separate and searching analysis. Probably the item veto would not be frequently employed. Mere knowledge that it could be used would be sufficient to induce consideration of each project on its own merits while the legislation was being formulated.

The President has asked Congress to decide whether a constitutional amendment or mere legislation is necessary to bring about the desired change. If there is any real doubt as to which is the proper procedure, a careful reading of Article 1, Section 7, should quickly resolve it. The President is there specifically given power to sign bills passed by the House and Senate, or to return them with his objections. But every bill is considered as a unit, and custom over a century and a half has confirmed the clear intent of the basic law.

With commendable enthusiasm over the President's suggestion, Chairman Ashurst of the Senate Judiciary Committee is attempting to secure early action on the Vandenberg amendment. The committee will be well advised to concentrate its efforts on this or a similar proposed amendment, and not to waste time on a bill that would almost certainly fail to accomplish its purpose.

The District's Urgent Need.

Washington, living largely on steady Government pay checks and enjoying a lucrative tourist business as well, is a virtually "depression-proof" city, according to the business leaders who commented in The Post's year-end financial summary. Notwithstanding, however, more than 37,000 persons were registered as unemployed here in the recent census.

Of these, 15,000 are supported by the WPA. Others are probably unemployable, and therefore eligible for District relief—though funds to assist them are so limited that many have been forced to turn to private charity. Also dependent on private charity is a group of 3,000 able but destitute men and women; for Washington is the only city in the country that provides no relief to unemployed employables.

Unemployment compensation payments are soon to begin, but that does not change the gloomy outlook for breadwinners who have had no work. To be eligible for benefits applicants must have been employed a minimum of 13 weeks during the last year.

A large number of persons who have had less than 13 weeks of work are faced by a really desperate situation. For the President in sending his budget to Congress, has utterly ignored the request of the Board of Public Welfare for funds to assist the city's unemployed employables.

Still more disheartening, the President recommended a cut in the District's expenditure's for the relief of unemployables. The current appropriation is $1,336,500. For next year, $2,022,750 had been asked. Instead, a reduction is recommended: $900,000 is the sum submitted in the 1939 budget.

To justify the cut, it is argued that increased social security grants make up the difference. But the fact remains that the amount available to the Board of Public Welfare would be scarcely enough to support the District's dependent children and perhaps a fringe of the unemployables, whose number is increasing regularly.

Acceptance of these recommendations would result in an intolerable situation. Congress has reduced general Federal relief expenditures, passing a considerable part of the burden back to local governments. This is commendable. But it makes it imperative for Congress to permit the District to shoulder its own relief responsibilities. Only if the parsimonious sum marked for District relief in the budget is increased, can the Capital hope to care for its unemployed. Congress must allow Washington to keep its own citizens from starving.

Tips Or Wages?

Employer and employee groups are discussing the question of the allowances, if any, to be made for tips in fixing minimum wages for local waitresses. Where tips constitute a regular and recognized method of compensation, supplementing and sometimes exceeding fixed wage payments, they cannot be ignored, as the employee group urges in the present case. The real question at issue is not whether allowances should be made for waitresses' tips, but whether the present opportunity should be taken to abolish the tipping system in hotels and restaurants affected by the District minimum wage laws.

There is certainly no satisfactory method of combining tips with guaranteed wages so as to assure a total income equal to officially decreed minima. Indeed, one of the most serious economic objections to tipping is the resulting forced dependence of wage-earners upon a constantly changing and far from dependable source of income.

In periods of slack business, the employee may find her income dropping below subsistence levels. Such deprivations are not offset by generous tips at other times. Aside from other factors, the unreliability of the tipping system places it at variance with the basic principle of minimum wage legislation, which is to provide a dependable income for its beneficiaries.

To achieve dependability while maintaining tips it has been suggested that waitresses transfer to their employers all tips received by them, and that the employer agree to make up any difference between this total and the minimum wage agreed upon. Such a system would be unsatisfactory for many reasons. It would tempt some employees to "hold out" on the employer, would entail additional accounting, would encourage a low form of espionage and might easily create other forms of disaffection among the workers. Customers, too, would be inclined to resent an arrangement which, superficially viewed, seems to make them shoulder part of the obligation to pay decent subsistence wages.

Of course, the average customer who tips actually pays no more than he would if there were no tips. The higher wages paid by employers where tipping is prohibited entails extra charges which are passed on and tend to offset the customary largesse. In any case the customer in the long run must pay enough to permit the employer to cover costs of service and all other costs, if the latter is to remain in business.

The most logical solution of the dilemma created by trying to fit tips into a system of minimum wages, adjusted to living costs, would be to abolish the gratuities altogether. Then such upward adjustments in menu prices could be made as seemed necessary to cover increases in direct wage payments. Another alternative is to add a fixed percentage of the bill as a service charge. This system, now almost universal in European countries, does away with the annoyance to the customer of the present system. But it still leaves the worker dependent upon a fluctuating source of income unless employers agree to supplement payments into the pooled fund whenever it fails to provide adequate returns for all.

The abolition of tipping may not prove practicable, however desirable from a strictly economic viewpoint. Unless the public as a whole supports efforts to eradicate it we might as well resign ourselves to continue a procedure which has little but custom in its favor. However, the minimum wage conference now in progress offers an unexcelled opportunity for acquiring much-needed information about the extent and effect of the tipping system, and for testing public sentiment toward proposals for its abolition in the District of Columbia.

Second Thoughts On Palestine.

The latest "White Paper" on Palestine leaves a strong impression that Great Britain is planning a retreat from the plan to partition the Holy Land which was announced last year. This plan called for the creation of independent Arab and Jewish states and a British-controlled corridor from Jerusalem to the sea.

For reasons of face the British government is clearly not disposed to abandon that plan immediately. It even continues to insist that the scheme presented by the Peel commission last summer remains "the best and most hopeful solution of the problem." But the mere fact that still another commission is to be sent to the Holy Land, and the emphasis on the great length of time its investigations will take, creates the suspicion that Britain is growing steadily less enthusiastic about the Peel plan.

This is hardly surprising. Since the partition idea was first advanced it has met with strong opposition. Few Jews and even fewer Arabs found it to their liking. There was an evident lack of enthusiasm for the plan in the House of Commons. The Permanent Mandates Commission regarded it with unfriendliness and the League Council refused to give the scheme its blessing.

Certainly it is very much open to question whether any change in this or that provision of the Peel plan will make the proposed transition easier. Obviously any modifications in the direction of greater territorial holdings for either the proposed Jewish or Arab state will meet with the approval of the would-be beneficiaries. But by the same token the opposition of the rival group is certain to increase. And it is doubtful if the basic opposition of both Jews and Arabs to partition as such will be removed.

In retrospect it would seem that Great Britain acted too hastily in throwing up the sponge regarding the further operation of the mandate as originally constituted. There are reasons to believe that had she earlier shown the energy of recent months in rounding up the ringleaders of the Arab terrorist movement, Palestine would not now be facing its present impasse. Under the circumstances the quicker Great Britain scraps the partition scheme and tries to make the mandate really work, the better it would seem to be for all concerned.

Remains Of The D. C. Budget.

Some items in the District budget for the fiscal year 1939 suggest that the Federal censors who stand between the local government and Congress have considered the city's needs more carefully than usual. Provision is made for another health center, for a convalescent ward to relieve the congestion at Gallinger Hospital, for the long-delayed police headquarters in the Municipal Center, for a new wing at the overcrowded District Jail and for several other much-needed improvements.

There will likewise be satisfaction over the recommendation that funds be provided for an underpass beneath Dupont Circle and the proposed Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge over the Anacostia. Another example of good judgment is the shifting of the United States District Court and the Court of Appeals from the local budget to that of the Department of Justice. Under this arrangement the expenses of maintaining these dominantly Federal courts will be more equitably divided between the local and national governments.

The transfer of street lighting costs from the general to the highway fund is also eminently sensible. Street lighting is definitely related to traffic control. The important consideration, however, is that this expense can be most easily met by drawing upon surplus highway funds. It is now up to Congress to make certain that this transfer will not deprive the District of its reasonable share of Federal-aid appropriations for road building.

It would be unreasonable, however, to expect a completely satisfactory budget when the Federal Budget Bureau is permitted to upset the carefully devised requests of District authorities. That agency is entirely competent in its own field. But when it presumes to slash $2,585,817 from the estimates prepared by Washington's own budget-making machinery it renders a disservice to Congress as well as to the community. Indeed, the District Commissioners are now engaged in presenting Washington's needs to a House sub-committee against a background frequently muddled by intervention of the Budget Bureau.

The community requested more policemen as a means of improving its unenviable crime record. That urgent appeal was overruled by the Budget Bureau, but it made provision for seven new clerks in the Police Department. Funds for new schools were sharply curtailed. But several items of special interest to the Federal Government, such as the $64,000 for waterfront improvements, were included.

Likewise, the bureau has ignored the sound arguments of the Commissioners for a larger Federal payment to cover the extraordinary expenses incurred by Washington in its role as the National Capital. The bureau refers to "the Federal contribution of $5,000,000" as if that were a fixed sum. Since the Federal payment sank to that figure expenses of the District have greatly increased. While national projects are favored, all the increased expenses are lumped on local taxpayers.

Considered as a whole, the new budget should strengthen the demand for a divorce between the local and national budgetary machinery, as recommended in the Prettyman report.

A New York minister figures that sin costs the people of this country $13,000,000,000 annually. Yes, and a lot of it isn't worth what it costs, either.

"Indiana man breaks two ribs laughing at jokes over radio."—Press report. Obviously nature used so much bone in his head she had little left for ribs.

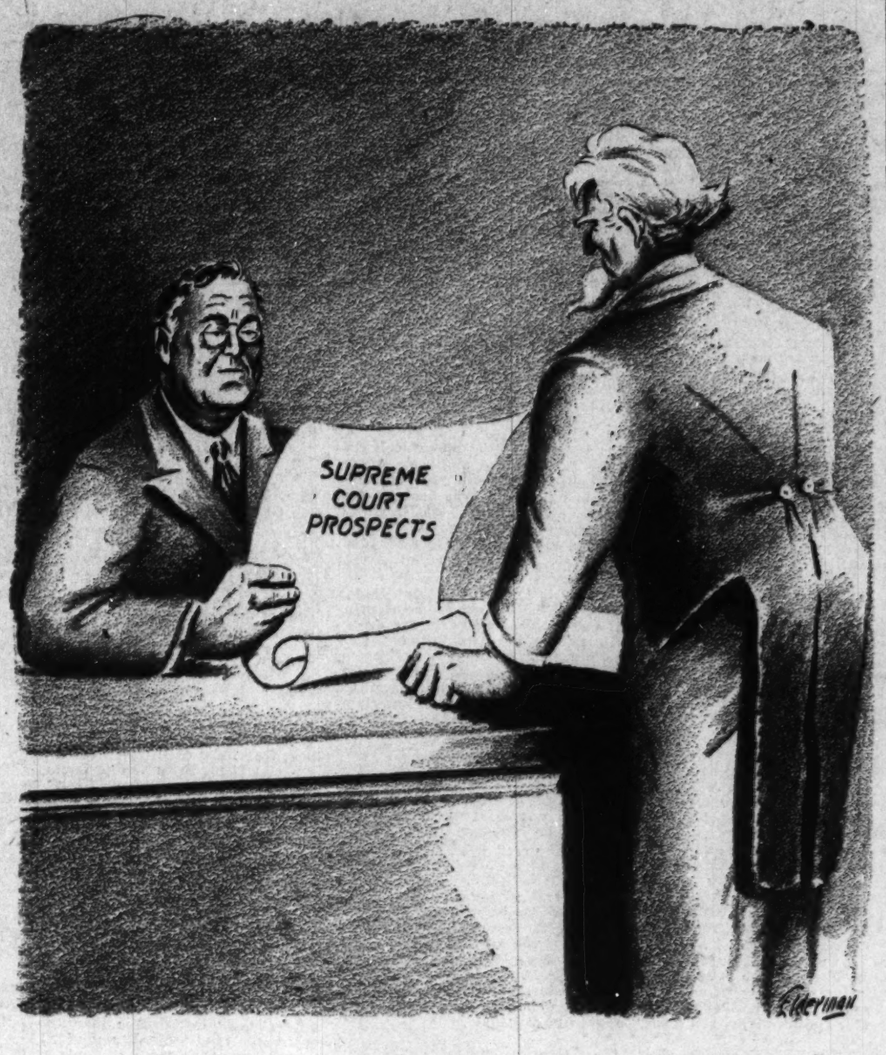
From the New York World-Telegram.

There is no element of surprise in the news that underground passages at Windsor Castle are being converted into bomb-proof, gas-proof shelters where the British royal family may seek refuge from enemy attacks on England.

But it is surprising and disconcerting to learn, from a Department of Commerce report, that financial interests in Goteborg, Sweden, are planning a new apartment house with bomb-proof cellars, gas-proof compartments and an emergency hospital room. We have thought of the Scandinavian countries as one area on the European map where the people are so unmistakably committed to peace as to be free from fear of war.

We were wrong, it seems. The Swedes and Norwegians and Danes kept out of the World War. Beyond doubt they want to keep out of any war. They are spending no billions on armament. But with such neighbors as they have, even they cannot be sure of safety. Will that apartment house in Goteberg, with its bomb-proof cellars and gas-proof rooms, stand as a monument to the dead hope of security for nations whose only desire is to mind their own business and keep the peace?



This Time Let's Think Of All The Implications, Frank.

Farm Control.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I can no longer resist the urge to give public expression to my views on what is termed "farm control."

Many people who live on farms do not produce sufficient to sustain life, and are compelled to buy from a brother farmer at prices that are far above the level of his circumstances. Yet his Government to whom he looks for protection collects his taxes and pays over to his brother to keep the prices up on the very products he is compelled to buy.

Nor does this injustice stop here. When we step outside the farm realm we are confronted with the hordes of human beings who, for their very subsistence, have to buy farm products. I ask is it just to collect taxes or revenues from this vast multitude and pay a favored class to keep the price high on the necessaries of life, that which is essential to keep soul and body together?

Give the farmer a free hand—remove any crop limitations—and let him profit by volume of production with prices at a level within reach of the less favored.

I feel that if the efforts and energies of our leaders, our Congress or commercial salesmen were directed toward increasing the volume of our export trade, seeking new channels of commerce, and new markets where farmers as well as all our industries may dispose of surpluses over and above our domestic needs, we would be heading toward an equitable solution.

Virginian On Glass.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

With all due respect to Mr. Waltman, there is a bit too much legpulling for his Sunday article on Senator Glass to be taken seriously. "Jefferson Principles Guide Noted Virginian" leads us to expect liberalism that is lacking.

In a State where the worship of dead things is almost a pagan fetish, the unchanging mind of Senator Glass is not remarkable. In a State where hundreds of thousands of poor whites and Negroes live in poverty equal to that enjoyed by European peasants, where an undemocratic poll tax keeps the people from electing humane and liberty-loving persons to represent them before the United States Government, it is not strange that a vain and stupid aristocracy elects itself to power in the name of Jefferson and democracy. It is not strange—it is the tragic truth and shame of a State where once Liberty was not an empty word. VIRGINIAN.

Reply To Stimson.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

As one of millions of young men who abhor war, and would have to fight if it is declared, may I request of you to print the following comments on Mr. Stimson's letter regarding a war referendum.

In it he states that the right of the President to recommend war and of Congress to declare it is based upon the principle of responsibility in government. Aside from the fact that under a democracy all power rests with, emanates from and is assigned by the people, it is interesting to note that 218 members of Congress, apparently aware that those now charged under the Constitution to declare war have done so under questionable circumstances, feel that perhaps it is best to let the people decide whether or not they want to sacrifice their lives and property in a war against another nation.

True, the question of dog-catching, as Mr. Stimson points out, is not as difficult, or, shall we say, ceremonial, as diplomatic tete-a-tetes; but the people in a democracy should have as much right to protect themselves from a dog with hydrophobia as from the rabies of war mongers, sword-rattlers and munitions traffickers.

Asserting that our Presidents have been reluctant to recommend war until suggested and urged by the people, Mr. Stimson stated that "McKinley waited for months; Woodrow Wilson for three years, each in the face of constant provocation and popular pressure," before they recommended war. Historical facts do not support this allegation. When McKinley called upon Congress to declare war on Spain he had in his possession a dispatch from the Spanish government conceding practically all the demands our Government had made. Wilson was re-elected in 1916 on the slogan and hope that he would keep us out of war; the people were not craving bloodshed.

A distortion of the letter and intent of the Ludlow resolution, interpreting it to mean that action cannot be taken unless our territory is attacked, makes possible Mr. Stimson's alarm over the security of the United States. What the resolution states is that in case of an attack upon our territory and citizens no referendum is necessary.

New Year Thoughts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The New Deal stands before the public as a flat failure, and no amount of talk will obscure this. It has had five years of time, billions of money, hundreds of laws and the benefit of public opinion. Does it now have the nerve to ask for anything further?

It is time we dropped this monkey-business and got back to old American fundamentals; back to economy in Government, temperance in public utterance and fair dealing to the business world and to the tax-paying public.

Let us take a new breath with the new year and make a new effort to make the old American ways work. They always have in the past and they will in the future.

LE ROY GAINES.
Washington, Dec. 31.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

My reaction to Mr. Ickes' anti-royalist radio speech was one of gratitude this speech was appropriately placed at the end of a bad year, with its wealth of troubles precipitated largely through the errors, misplaced benevolence and cockeyed ideas of our political greats. A few more speeches of like celiber should insure a 1938 as malevolent as 1937.

Too many small businessmen are already congratulating themselves that they are still on the sidelines—this correspondent is one. That is not a healthy condition in a democracy. E. G. BARR.
Washington, Dec. 31.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

At this New Year's time, we should put aside bitterness. This is the time when we must soberly refrain from believing that any class of our people is wholly bad. We must realize that, regardless of whether men are rich or poor, they have the same mingling of compassion, avarice, desire to serve and desire to take which is the common law of mankind.

We must not believe that there is any law which can change human nature. We must be temperate even under great stress to the emotions. We must remember that the lot of every man in the United States today is better than the lot of man has ever been in the world. We must seek to keep this land a place where boys can dream dreams and make their dreams come true. We must remember that "there now abideth Faith, Hope and Charity and that the greatest of these is Charity." JOEL W. EASTMAN.

Actions Asked Of New Deal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Well, the New Deal has been in the saddle now for five or more years and what has it done, except talk, about rectifying conditions?

The small stockholders have not an iota more of control over their corporations than they had before the New Deal took charge despite all the publicity of how the New Deal has corrected market abuses. Insiders continue to pay themselves hundreds of thousands of dollars compensation annually, allowing, in many cases, investors to whistle for their dividends. Mr. Jackson tells us about these high salaries being boosted during 1937, but what has his Administration done to alleviate the condition? Nothing!

Instead of bulling the public why doesn't the New Deal go to work and enact legislation that will give majorities of stockholders power to gain control of their companies; why doesn't it require that corporation and officers have substantial interest in such corporations before they can qualify as such; and why doesn't it set up some kind of a barrier against a few insiders of each corporation paying themselves fancy annual salaries and bonuses?

Action, instead of words, would be more in keeping with the situation complained of.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It is indeed inspiring to see the complete success which has crowned our national efforts toward the establishment of an unalterable policy to maintain peace.

The descendants of those intrepid souls who landed at Plymouth Rock, conquered a vast wilderness and threw off the yoke of tyranny of King George may now feel the same warm glow of supreme achievement experienced by their forefathers—for they have attained something of equally epic consequence. As a matter of fact, a full appreciation of the high moral status now enjoyed by the Nation as a result of its determination to enforce an eternal peace might easily temp us to think that our fighting forebears have been more than matched in worthy accomplishment.

After all, though poets and historians have sought in song and story to glorify the memory of those who fought and died at Bunker Hill and Lexington, we should not forget that these ancestors were men who signally failed to realize that Peace is the only god worthy of worship.

However that may be, sir, we must nevertheless continue our educational campaign without abatement for, ridiculous as it sounds, there are still some people in this country, not yet converted to the true and unimpeachable doctrine of pacifism, who persist in suggesting that such mere incidents—accidents, rather—as the Panay sinking should be given more than a passing thought or sigh of regret.

We who love peace must never cease to strive for its continuance as long as there are those who would advocate measures against another country stronger than diplomatic note writing, merely because of the intentional destruction of a 2-by-4 gunboat with the loss of a few lives. It is no exaggeration to assert that such persons would do this notwithstanding there existed a distinct danger that the rulers of the dauntless Japanese air squadron, which put up such a stubborn battle against our two seaman gunners, would threaten America's precious peace.

Yes, there are some folk who actually go so far as to say that they would prefer to sacrifice peace rather than lose the respect of all men or scuttle the funny little ideals of the past (now fortunately outmoded), such as the sancity of the American flag and the safety of American citizens throughout the world. There are even one or two—and this is really unbelievable—who prate about honor; that without honor peace is too dear a blessing. Imagine that!

Mother Learns To Drive.

SHOW me a man who'd admit that women are better drivers, and you show me one lost to the finer feelings of caste.

Now, I've known many women who were excellent drivers, some even more expert than men, and many who were terrible behind the wheel; but, you know, it's not the way they drive, but teaching them how to drive that puts the real strain on a man.

* * *

None of the three children who composed my family will ever forget those harried days when Dad was teaching Mother to drive.

We were along on the first Sunday afternoon when Dad started showing Mother the fundamentals. He drove out to the unsettled portion of town, parked, and proceeded giving instructions in the art of shifting.

It did not take long to see that it would be a tough process. I doubt that Mother really ever managed to grasp the workings of a bicycle brake years before. Finally she indicated that she knew the difference between first and second, and high and reverse, and Dad showed her how to start the car. Mother got that, too, after stalling six times.

When Dad decided to let Mother handle the car in motion, you began to see his reasons for getting out into the country section. Perhaps the streets were not so good out there, but there certainly was no traffic. At times my imagination still toys with the picture of Mother learning to drive on busy Connecticut avenue.

* * *

Mother started the engine and raced it until I could see that Dad was keeping from shouting for her to stop only by great effort. When Mother put the automobile in gear, she removed her foot from the clutch all at once. The car shot back over a curb and stopped up against a telegraph pole.

Sister Ann had been sitting on the back seat looking out the rear window. She hit her face against it and began to cry. Sister Glory just clutched her doll tighter and whimpered. I, startled out of a Dan'l Boone dream, opened the side door and was on my way out when I got a belt across the ear. I sat back then and considered the sterner realities of a boy's life.

At least, that was all for that lesson. Dad took the wheel and drove home. Mother was a nervous wreck for several days. Other women friends of hers drove, though, so when she regained her courage, the lessons continued.

I have no first hand information regarding them. We children were not allowed to go along, either because we made Mother nervous, or because she didn't want us to hear Dad swearing, I think, although I have forgotten the exact reason.

Finally, the day came when Dad considered that Mother could drive the automobile without his presence. It was decided that she was to drive him down to work in the morning, and then get back home all by herself. Every member of the family went to bed excited.

* * *

My turn at the bathroom came just after Dad had finished shaving. Usually, it took at least three calls to rouse me out of bed, but on that morning I was up as soon as Mother let "Snooky," my dog, into the room. "Snooky" always sat outside the door and whined for half an hour every morning waiting for me to get up. Anyway, I was around when Dad and Mother drove on, feeling chagrined because they wouldn't take me with them.

It must have been a good hour later before Mother got the car home. "Snooky" and I were outside waiting, all hopped up with anticipation.

You could tell something was wrong when the automobile first turned into the lower end of the street. It wobbled like a lopsided ball in flight. As it came nearer, I could see a crumpled front fender. The bumper was battered and scratched. And Mother! Well, as Grandma remarked, Mother was "fit to be tied."

And then just as Mother was turning into the driveway, the car stalled. She stepped on the starter and raced the engine. I held my breath and the quivering "Snooky." Mother put the car in gear and took her foot off the clutch all at once. The car shot back and stopped against the telephone pole on the other side of the street.

It stayed there all day.

* * *

There weren't any more lessons after that. The whole matter was dropped. Dad let no one else touch the car until I was old enough to learn to drive. He took me out to the same country section, and I have always been rather proud that when I first put the automobile in gear it did not start off in reverse. No, it stopped a block down the street against the rear bumper of another car.

President And Congress.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

President Franklin D. Roosevelt's annual message gave effective demonstration that he understands the public sentiment.

A great majority of the American citizens no doubt regard him as the only leader. Sincerity is the reason. No one can deny he is destined for the immortal circle.

On the other hand, Congress usually misrepresents the voters. Such malefactors interfere with progressive legislation. They should know times are changing. It follows that new creative measures obviously must be provided.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Eddie Neil.

EDDIE NEIL, the Associated Press reporter who was killed by a shell in Spain, was a member of that laughing, skylarking company of sports writers who campaigned with the ball clubs and football troupes and covered the big fights in the era that Paul Gallico called the Golden Decade. He was a tall, smiling kid, but prematurely gray with a bobbing cockade of white hair when he first came to town, and it took him no time at all to become a first-string man in an unbelievably pleasant and widely envied line of work.

PEGLER.

The sports writer led the life of Riley, and hundreds of other newspapermen naturally wished to break away from the city side and other departments and go clattering around the country with a little toy typewriter and a satchel in the company of the athletes and the fascinating characters of the prize fight trade, with nothing to do but write easy pieces about events which millions of people paid to see.

The sports side still is the free and easy branch of journalism, and I cannot imagine that it will ever again be as attractive as it was in Eddie Neil's time in the press section. There is no Ruth, no Bobby Jones, no Rickard, and the fizzling out of Joe Louis, the colored boy, leaves the heavyweight class of fighters without a writable character, for Max Schmeling is a dull and oft-told tale, and Tommy Farr, though picturesque, seems unimportant.

• • • •

EDDIE BROKE AWAY a couple of years ago, and though I hadn't seen him since, I judge from old conversations and from his timing that he was bored by the triviality and repetition of the stories which he was covering and wanted a line of work that would give his ambition something to punch at. He never seemed particularly adventurous in the sports business, but when he started going to the wars we began to hear of his taking risks which to those who tooled along behind the war in France in good cars were beyond the line of duty.

That was a well-regulated war, with routine and rules, but these new ones seem to be very loosely conducted, for I believe more correspondents have been killed and wounded in Abyssinia, China and Spain than in the entire four years of the War to End War—on the allied side, at least.

Eddie flew with his Italian friends in Abyssinia and was injured in a crash. He exposed his life in Palestine, and finally, in Spain, a long distance and a long time away from his wife and little boy, he was killed. The big war produced some really fine writing by Phil Simms, Phillip Gibbs, Wythe Williams and others, but these new wars are adventure assignments, and it is my impression that there is a sacrifice of art or vanity in the writing in favor of facts obtained by brave initiative under hard and dangerous conditions. Webb Miller, after his experiences in Abyssinia and Spain, was taut and trembling when he was last in this country, and the reporter who now probably can claim to have covered more wars than any other active reporter and to have covered them the hard way, intimately and to a large extent on foot, seemed to need a year in the quiet routine of night police.

• • • •

IT IS HARD to write of the character of a good friend who has gone, without slopping over, but anyone who knew Eddie Neil on the sports side will agree that there was something in his nature which always made people happier when he came onto an assignment. There are people like that whose optimism and confidence and pleasure in life and work and decency in their dealings with others have a helpful effect on those with whom they associate. The men who worked with Eddie in the war business will say that of him, although undoubtedly they will say it better.

In years of friendship with Eddie I never knew or heard of a single mean or selfish act, and the men who had the luck to work on the same pine benches with him at sports shows from Cambridge to Los Angeles and Miami will share the loss of Helen Nolan Neil, the little girl reporter who used to wait in the background for him to fold up his box after the big fights.

He was just whooping along on his new career as a war correspondent, and nothing could have stopped him less than a shell.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Fear? What A Silly Notion!

You are dizzy and sick and you're feeling quite low—
There's that old ringing noise in each ear;
There's a hand at your throat, but be happy and know
That you really have nothing to fear!

II

There are threats in the air and the gospel of hate
Is spread nightly through "mikes," loud and clear;
There's a foot on your neck, but you ought to feel great,

III

There's an ambush ahead and your hair is on end,
And your scalp may quite soon disappear;
There's a knife in your back, but on this please depend—
You have nothing whatever to fear!

IV

You're surrounded, my boy, and you haven't a chance—
All around are the catcalls and jeers;
You are losing your shirt and your vest and your pants—
But away with all worries and fears!

V

You have lost heavy dough and are deep in the red—
And your net for the year brings a tear;
You are feeling quite sick and may even feel dead—

VI

You were jumped on and bossed till you're blue in the face
And you've been through a terrible year;
In your skull is a weapon that feels like a mace—
But there's nothing, believe us, to fear!

VII

All your profits are gone and you're closing the shop—
With the bankruptcy court looming near;
Everywhere that you look you see people go "plop!"—
But how silly to nourish a fear!

VIII

"You're a crook!" is the cry. "You've an evil, base mind!
Every move that you make is quite queer—
We are out for your hide from in front and behind,
But we can't understand what you fear!"

IX

There's a sheriff outside and he carries a knife,
And some fellows most anxious to smear
All your motives and actions throughout all your life—

Congressman Discovers Eager Recruit In Dobbin.

CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

By Louis M. Jiggitts.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Petunia,
Dec. 5, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

When you saved the cherry trees in Washington for us last spring you told me to write you whenever I needed your help again, and so I am. You said it was always a pleasure to serve your constituents, so I know you will be glad to hear that I am worried about a problem you can help me with.

As you know, my husband, Mr. Dubius Dobbin, owns and operates the Greater Petunia Clothing, Hardware & Undertaking Establishment (Motto: We Gladly Serve You From the Cradle to the Grave), and things are slowing up so fast that he is beginning to worry about what else you are going to do to business so that it is worrying me, too.

Please let me know what you and the other leaders are going to do about this by return mail.

Yours sincerely,
(MRS.) DORA DOBBIN.

Washington, D. C.
Dec. 7, 1937.

Mrs. Dora Dobbin,
Petunia.
My Dear Mrs. Dobbin:

The Congressman is engaged in a very important conference with a few other leaders, but in his absence I am glad to say that it is certainly always his pleasure to serve a contituent, as you state, and I can assure you that he will be happy to learn that you are worried about a problem. And if you feel free to disclose it I am sure that he will be pleased to offer a solution after mature deliberation.

I know the Congressman will regret to learn that your husband is worrying you, too, but you may be sure that he will be glad to give this his most serious consideration upon his return to the office.

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE.
Secretary.

Petuniz,
Dec. 11, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I am not worried about my husband worrying me. It's that I am worried about my husband being worried about business that worries me which I hope will make it clear to you now why.

I am glad to say that my husband is the thoughtful kind and often thinks about me too.

Mr. Slim Slack who had dinner with us last night said that he thought what was wrong was that every time you tried to hit a big fellow you clouted 10 little ones instead.

I hope you will let me know at once what you are going to do about the recession so that I can get my husband's worries off my mind.

Yours sincerely,
(MRS.) DORA DOBBIN.

Washington, D. C.
Dec. 14, 1937.

Mrs. Dora Dobbin,
Petunia.
My Dear Mrs. Dobbin:

I regret that the Congressman is still in conference but I am sure that he will be pleased to learn that your husband often thinks of you, and it would be a good thing if a lot of other husbands did the same.

You want to know how Congress clouts the little fellows. As soon as the Congressman returns to the office I am sure that he will be delighted to tell you how.

I know you will be happy to learn also that the Congressman is giving serious consideration to the present business decline. I am glad to inform you that he was giving the present recession much thought before some of the other leaders would admit there was one. In fact, the Congressman has often been congratulated on his remarkable precipitance.

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE.
Secretary

Petunia,
Dec. 16, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I don't want to know how you clout the little fellows. What I want to know is why you do it and when you are going to stop it. My husband says that if you don't help the little fellows there won't be any to help pretty soon.

I told Mr. Slack about you being in conference all the time and he said that if all the Congressmen would just stay in conference all the time we wouldn't have so many laws to worry with and not to disturb you.

We noticed that the special session hasn't been doing anything and Mr. Pete Peedler, who operates the local Tonsorial and Confectionary Shop and who says his motto is "Never Do Today What You Can Put Off Tomorrow Too," said that he thought the special session a great success, as it is the first session in a long time that you haven't invented some new bureau to worry the people with.

Please let me know when you are going to start business going again. Mr. Dobbin says if you don't start business going it will soon be gone.

Yours sincerely,
(Mrs.) DORA DOBBIN.

Washington, D. C.
Dec. 18, 1937.

Mrs. Dora Dobbin,
Petunia.
Dear Mrs. Dobbin:

I am somewhat disturbed that you should have the impression that I am always in conference. I can assure you that I never fail to attend the sessions except, of course, when I am unavoidably detained, and that I am constantly at work in the interests of my constituents. In truth, I have often been referred to as a courier for my constituents, as I have continuously interviewed department heads from one end of Washington to the other in efforts to secure jobs for worthy citizens of Verbena and surrounding counties. That I am always alert to the interests of my constituents is attested to by the fact that we have in Washington a splendid society known as the Verbena County Social and Economic Welfare Club of Washington, D. C., composed of worthy citizens from that great county who have consented to work for the Government and in the interest of all the people of our illustrious country. And I take no little pride in being both a life member and the honorary president of this fast-growing club.

Trusting that you will realize that I have dedicated my life to working for the economic and social betterment both of my district and of our country, I am

Yours very sincerely,

Dec. 21, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

Mr. Poke Potts who you got a job for as Capitol policeman has already written to his cousin, Miss Primrose Potts, about what a fine club you have and how much all five members admire you, but I am interested in knowing what you are doing for the people back home.

I have been reading the Congressional Records which you send regularly to Mrs. Fannie Sitz and there is something I can't understand in them besides what the Senators say. I notice that the Senate meets on one day but states that it is meeting on another day way back. How can they meet December 14, for instance, and say they are meeting on November 16? Mrs. Sitz and I are wondering why the Senate wants to do this to the calendar too.

My husband says he will have to sell his business if you don't stop the recession at once, I am

Dec. 23, 1937.

Mrs. Dora Dobbin,
Petunia.
My dear Mrs. Dobbin:

You want to know how the Senate can meet on one day and say it is meeting on another. I am glad to inform you that Congress can do anything unless the Supreme Court doesn't like it any more than the people do.

Trusting that this is the information that you desire and assuring you that we take the greatest pleasure in rendering such service to the constituents of the Congressman, I am

Yours sincerely,

Petunia,
Dec. 25, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I appreciate your explaining why the Senate acts that way, but what I want you to explain is what you are going to do about little business.

Petunia Dealer Asks Full Membership Privileges.

I am getting more worried all the time with my husband which is a sad way to spend Christmas day. We don't look for a very prosperous New Year either like things are now.

We can't understand here in Petunia why it is that the better Mother Nature is to us the worse off we are. We are beginning to think there must be something wrong when good crops bring hard times.

Yours sincerely,
(Mrs.) DORA DOBBIN.

Washington, D. C.
Dec. 27, 1937.

Mrs. Dora Dobbin,
Petunia,
My dear Mrs. Dobbin:

The doctrine of scarcity is an experiment to make people pay more for less.

You want to know why when Mother Nature is plentiful and crops are good we have hard times. It is because when things are so plentiful some of us don't have enough money to buy them. The more we have the less we can get for it so we don't have money to buy what another party has too much of too and vice versa. But the less we have the more money we can get for it to pay for what another has less of too. It is a very intricate economic problem as you can see but the Congressman is giving it his most serious consideration and is hopeful of an ultimate solution. He maintains that when this is solved we will have continuous prosperity which I feel sure will be welcome news to you.

Assuring you that it is a great pleasure to explain these phenomena to you, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Petunia,
Dec. 29, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

Why do they want to make the people pay more for less? It looks like to me it would be better to make people pay less for more and they are putting the buggy before the horse.

Mr. Slack said he had been worrying so about business that he hadn't been able to sleep until he borrowed some Congressional Records from Mrs. Sitz. He said he got to reading them every night and now he feeels fine, and that just goes to show that a lot of things can be made worth while, after all, if you just know the proper use to put them to, and that one copy of the Congressional Record is worth any 12 sleeping powders on the market.

I know you will be glad to hear that our good friend, Mrs. Fannie Sitz, wrote a poem about you in the last issue of the Verbena County Weekly Bugle and Gazette. She told me the other day that she is now studying big words to dignify her poems. Mrs. Sitz said in the paper that it is "A Double-Sextuple Ode, being a 12-lined poem with Apothegms sandwiched between Repeated Echolalias, entitled Hero, Model 1938":

All hail to Cicero Fulpan
Of the hour is the great man,
The vibrating voice of Verbena,
The pulsating pride of Petunia;
In Congress when he takes comman'
They always enforce his deman'
This vibrating voice of Verbena,
This pulsating pride of Petunia;
All Washington knows of this man,
The inimical, incomparable Fulpan,
That vibrating voice of Verbena,
That pulsating pride of Petunia.

Mr. Slack says he guesses Congress will start taking orders again but I am glad to let you know that it doesn't matter now. For I have saved the best news for last. I know you will be happy to learn that Mr. Dobbin has sold the Greater Petunia Clothing, Hardware & Undertaking Establishment and says he is going to join the Verbena County Social and Economic Welfare Club of Washington, D. C., as soon as you can get a suitable job for him, and I know you are glad that we are happy at the thought of soon seeing you and the cherry blossoms in bloom, too.

Please let me know if you have anything good to offer at this time.

Your true friend,
(Mrs.) DORA DOBBIN.

Washington, D. C.
Dec. 31, 1937.

Mrs. Dora Dobbin,
Petunia.
Dear Mrs. Dobbin:

It is with the greatest regret that I am compelled to state that at the moment I do not have any suitable positions available. But I shall certainly keep your worthy husband in mind, and at the first opportunity will endeavor to place him.

Assuring you that I consider it a pleasure to use my influence in your behalf, I am

Yours very sincerely,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia.
Jan. 4, 1938.

Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

My husband says you need not hurry, as he wants to rest up a bit to prepare for a Government job. But I am anxious to come to Washington before spring and I hope you have thought up something for him by now.

Mr. Dobbin says he has a great deal of business experience and that he has been wrestling with regulations so long now he believes he would be the man to run some bureau to regulate business. He says he would like to be on the regulating end for a while.

Hoping to hear good news from you soon, I am

Your true friend,
(Mrs.) DORA DOBBIN.

Washington, D. C.
Jan. 6, 1938.

Mrs. Dora Dobbin,
Petunia.
My Dear Mrs. Dobbin:

I regret that the Congressman hasn't thought of anything yet, but he is making every effort to do so. You may be sure that he will endeavor to place Mr. Dobbin in the very first bureau that Congress creates this session.

Wishing you as prosperous a New Year as the last, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Down East

By Robert P. Tristram Coffin

WPA Guide To Maine.

THIS NEW WPA guide to my State is full of facts. I suppose many people who want to know the exact measurements of things in time and space will find it extremely useful. Even if they don't find everything they want to know at their fingertips, as the jacket blurb reads, they will find more facts about Maine than were ever assembled before in so brief and attractive a space. The photographs are remarkable for clarity and composition. They come close to being works of art. The print and the paper, the cover and the grouping of materials are excellent. It is a pleasure just to turn the pages.

But there are flaws in them. Though I don't believe the statistical way is the best way to get acquainted with Maine, I have enough respect for facts—for other people—to want them to be facts. The hurried guests of my State are apt to find a lot of misinformation stuck to their fingertips. That is, if the description of my own town is a fair sample of the book. There is a map of Brunswick, at page 142, with four mistakes in it. I was surprised to find that I, myself, live on Pine street, not on Harpswell street as I had always thought, that Noble street has become Neale street overnight, that Cleaveland street is misspelled and that the woodroad I used to drive home my village cows on, when I was a boy, is McClellan street and not Longfellow avenue. That's a pretty high average of errors.

• • • •

NOT SO GREAT an army ever worked on a guidebook before. It just proves to me that you cannot get a first-class book of facts done—or any other kind—by turning an army corps loose on the material. It's the old army game of too many cooks and too little cooking.

I know the game; I saw it played in France. It was responsible for all our regiment's field ranges and B. C. telescopes never being seen again after we left Portland, Me. And for our having no quinine when the Spanish 'flu hit us. It can take a sinister turn, like that.

Multiply these two towns by a hundred, and the mistakes in this guide may become annihilating. It is too bad. For I and a lot of other people had to dig down into our trousers to pay for this work being done. We have a right to expect a higher average of efficiency.

And my particular copy of the Maine Guide lacks 14 pages where I wanted them most. Just as I got started toward my boyhood's Lost Paradise, on Great Island, East Harpswell, on Island Tour No. 1, I was left right in the air, staring at a waterfall. I wonder how many people have copies like mine.

One can forgive the fact collectors many of their sins, though, when one reads the stirring account of Bangor's Devil's Half-Acre in the Golden Age of Penobscot lumbering!

STATISTICS are not the thing to trust if you want to get to know Maine or anything else. I am glad to see that this new kind of a guidebook makes use of a finer sort of stuff. That is the interpretation of the factual materials, the general cultural aspect and temper of my State. Far and away the best parts of this book are the essays on the folklore, literature, art, architecture and such, of Maine. Here the essence of my Down East finally emerges, with something of the aroma of Maine balsam and bayberry. Here is what visitors want to know—not the populations of towns, the miles between them, and the condition of the roads.

The cultural interpretation is fine, but not quite fine enough for Maine. Not enough is made of the distinctive virtues of the place. The interpretation is constantly hurt by the repetition of a caveat that the best in architecture and design, folkways and such is derivative, that it comes from other parts of New England, Old England, Timbuctoo or whatever you wish.

This is wrong. This is what comes of having a headquarters in Massachusetts, and Massachusetts cooks with ladles in the broth. Outsiders put in their oar every so often. I have been all over New England, and I know for a fact that Maine rural architecture owes very, very little to the rest of New England and is, save in a few scattered places in Connecticut, far superior to anything the rest can show. There are no farmhouses on Cape Cod or anywhere else in Massachusetts that can hold a candle to the best along the Maine Coast. There are farmhouses falling into ruin along the lower Kennebec that for originality in American adaptation of the Georgian style make the houses in Portsmouth look feeble.

• • • •

IT'S THE OLD STORY of the shadow of Newburyport and Salem obscuring Bath and Waldoforo and Thomaston. Maine is not, and never was, an ell to Massachusetts. Its architecture is its own. For excellent houses built not by architects, but by plain carpenters, Maine leads all the New England States. An attempt is made in the Maine Guide to stress this point—of the excellence of Maine carpenters—but it is too feeble.

Not enough is made of the orientation of Maine farmhouses—it was the east the front doors faced, not the south as the book has it—or of the institution of the connected farm buildings and the glory of the Maine barns, with clapboards, blinds and cupolas, that deserve to stand behind some of the chateaux of France.

The essayist on architecture warns the reader that when the records say that Capt. So-and-So built this house, it means that he hired men to build it all. That is what comes of thinking in the Massachusetts groove. Capt. So-and-So very likely did exactly what he said. I can take you to eight houses within a few miles of Brunswick where the owners actually used adze and saw to make their mantels and cupolas just as they wanted them. By the same token, they still do.

• • • •

THERE ARE many other errors. I resent the glib condemnation of the rural school, since I got the best part of my education in one. That school served Maine better, I think, than the departmentalized imitations of colleges are doing now.

And I personally resent being called an author who is "retrospective, dealing with a world that is past." Most of the poems I have written about Maine are alive and kicking now, or others just like them. "Saltwater Farm" is living tissue. I can find you plenty of boys living my Lost Paradise farm days now. I am not an antiquarian, I am writing of a Maine that is the present and the future, too, if it is going to be worth its salt.

The chapter on the Maine farm is poor. You can't see that cradle of poetry for the produce it brings forth. As if produce were its chief crop! I am sorry the writer on handcrafts did not do more with whittling. He did so splendidly with public carving, the great figureheads on Maine ships and the like, I wish he had done more with the private samples of this home art, the dolls, butter-pats, tollers, peachstones, harness hooks, weathervanes—not to mention such things as ships inside bottles.

• • • •

BUT THERE IS enough I can stand up and wave my hat about. I am glad to see the Coffin family doughnuts are here, the educated kind that turn themselves over in their fat and leap out when they are done.

The folklore chapter is an essay of the first water. It is a good thing for the world to know of the Bullockites, the Cochranites, who turned to a religion of song and dance among Maine pines and made love free, the Palestine Emigrationites, and the Shilohites, who kept their house of religion, with windows burning like the eyes of seraphim, above my boyhood trout stream.

The chapter on architecture is splendidly done. So is the one on Maine writers and the one on the artists. Here is a guidebook of the right kind.

I wish the whole book had been "General Background!"

"MAINE, A GUIDE 'DOWN EAST,'" by Workers of the Federal Writers' Project of the Works Progress Administration for the State of Maine. (Houghton Mifflin, $2.50.)

House Battles Over Slash in Agency Funds

By the Associated Press.

Administration efforts to cut $114,806,780 from the appropriations requested by independent Government agencies ran into immediate opposition in the House yesterday.

The House Appropriations Committee trimmed the independent offices appropriation bill to $1,414,818,515, approving the reductions urged by the Budget Bureau, but it did this only after a bitter controversy behind closed doors.

The opposition, renewed later on the House floor, centered upon a $123,669,000 slash in funds for the Civilian Conservation Corps.

Labor Board Nearly Loses.

Committee critics of the National Labor Relations Board almost succeeded in striking that agency's $2,955,000 allotment from the bill just before the measure was sent to the House.

Members said Representative Dockweiler (Democrat), of California, offered an amendment to eliminate the appropriation, and served notice he would press the fight in the House unless the board changed its attitude toward the American Federation of Labor. Charges that the board has favored the C. I. O. have been made by the A. F. of L.

The committee made good on the pledge of Chairman Taylor (Democrat) of Colorado, to cut all appropriation bills below the Budget Bureau's estimates. It reduced the bill's total $3,732,020 below the figure recommended by the bureau.

TVA Bears Brunt of Cuts.

Most of this reduction was borne by the Tennessee Valley Authority. The committee lopped $2,913,000 from a $40,000,000 budget estimate for TVA, of which $2,613,000 had been asked to start construction on the proposed $112,000,000 flood-control dam at Gilbertsville, Ky. A total of $285,000 was allowed, however, for "project investigations" connected with this undertaking.

Shortly after the bill reached the House floor, Representative Johnson (Democrat), Oklahoma, denounced the proposed CCC reduction, contending it would demoralize the agency.

"I want to warn you gentlemen," the Oklahoman said, "if this reduction is approved it will mean the beginning of the end of the CCC."

He asserted a "dole proposition" would be substituted for the Conservation Corps' work, and "a gentleman named Harry Hopkins would take control of the camps—and make a flop of them."

Other Reductions.

In addition to the CCC curtailment, the Budget Bureau recommended—and the committee approved—reductions of $37,914,500 for the Veterans' Administration and $23,845,077 for the Railroad Retirement Board.

These economies were offset largely, however, by increases of $70,559,322 for the Social Security Board; $1,852,000 for the civil service retirement fund, and $1,036,500 for the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Some of the major items in the bill include $77,504,000 for the Civil Service Commission, mostly for the retirement fund; $329,300,000 for the Social Security Board; $31,652,000 for the Rural Electrification Administration, and $547,917,500 for the Veterans' Administration.

During hearings on the bill, Stewart McDonald, Federal housing administrator, told the committee he thought it would not be good business for persons to build new homes in which they had only a 10 per cent equity—as they would under the Administration's pending legislation to stimulate home construction.

Governors Meet Today to Discuss Industrial Boom

By the Associated Press.

Southeastern Governors will meet here today to discuss progress of a campaign for industrial development of their States.

Gov. Bibb Graves of Alabama, conference chairman, said the discussions would concern principally the organization's plea to the Interstate Commerce Commission for reduced commodity freight rates to northern territory.

Member Governors have a luncheon engagement today with President Roosevelt, but L. W. Robert, jr., Washington representative of the conference, said they had no specific proposals to make.

They, with William Astor Chanley, comprised the thirteenth expedition to search for Paul Redfern, aviator missing since 1927. Redfern was recently declared legally dead.

Business Failures Rise.

New York, Jan. 6 (AP).—Business failures in the United States for the 5-day week ended December 30 jumped to 249 from 209 in the preceding 6-day period and 173 in the short 1936 week. The latest week was the most active since January 7, 1936, when 262 failures were recorded.

Green Roosevelt Guest; Lewis Never Invited

Another gesture of friendliness on President Roosevelt's part to the American Federation of Labor was seen last night when William Green, A. F. of L. president, was revealed as one of the guests at the State dinner at the White House in honor of Vice President and Mrs. John N. Garner.

None could recall any White House dinner list which contained the name of John L. Lewis, chairman of the C. I. O. Although Lewis was an ardent supporter of the President a year ago, their relationship cooled after the President's utterance of "a plague o' both your houses" during C. I. O. difficulties with industry last summer.

*X — WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, JANUARY 7, 1938 — 13

Harlan MILLER Over the Coffee

It's a white-tie dinner party in the Washington manner, and the lucky hostess has lassoed a couple of the more decorative diplomats. . . . Some of the lesser guests are caught off guard and are flexing their social muscles to measure up. This is the merry month of January, and your other shirt's in the laundry all the time.

* * * *

One look at the butler and you know how you'll feel when you face St. Peter. . . . Apparently he sees the mends in your underdrawers. . . . The ladies, bless 'em, behave as if they'd been dating diplomats all through high school.

* * * *

If the neighbors back in Des Moines, Iowa, could only see you now. . . . The butler is murmuring something about cards, and some of the men fish in their pockets. . . . But it turns out that he's passing out the cards with the name of the gal you're taking in to dinner.

* * * *

Now the butler is delicately showing the men a blueprint of the dinner table, helping them chart a course so they won't sit in some dowager's lap and get lost. . . . They study it with knitted brows.

* * * *

At the drawing room door a distinguished gray haired chap bawls out your names startlingly . . . He gets it nearer correct than he did last week at the French Embassy . . . The men suck in their tummies and tug at their tails and try to look sufficiently important.

* * * *

You run the gauntlet between a double line of more punctual guests, all standing a little stiffly. . . . In about 60 seconds you try to apprehend a score of names, most of them foreign melanges of vowels and consonants. . . . You emerge uncertain which guests are mates, which diplomat is South American, which European.

* * * *

Three different men ask if you've heard that young Cabot Lodge fell out of the presiding officer's chair at the Senate this afternoon, and if you heard Bob Reynolds' wisecrack about the impact of his Senatorial eloquence.

* * * *

Your host is gently jollying a couple of Senators about their antics on the Hill, and they don't have any ready answer . . . You join the double line and try to look fairly formidable to the later arrivals . . .

* * * *

A footman eases a cocktail at you as if it were the Kohinoor diamond, and you notice there is tomato juice for some of the statesmen. . . . Your hostess is stirring and blending the guests as if she were whipping up a fruit cake.

* * * *

The olive in your cocktail is still an inch down when dinner is announced, and you can't spot the pretty thing you're taking in to dinner. . . . When you finally separate her forcibly from an Italian attache you collide with the traffic jam at the dining room door.

"—he defends his dish."

No one knows whether to march in behind an undersecretary or in front of a Senator . . . There is congestion in the rear rank, as when charging a machine-gun nest. . . . You have a feeling that you have trampled on the ranking guest.

* * * *

You are outraged when it develops you are not to sit next to the delicious tidbit you have more or less guided to her seat. . . . You fall into a melancholia and forget to make conversation with the innocent creatures right and left until you espy your hostess waggling her pretty chin at you.

* * * *

Then you overdo the conversation and to your horror the footmen (one to every three guests) begin to snatch your plates away ere you have nibbled. . . Maybe your hostess is a devotee of 30-minutes-at-table. . . . The filet of sole is dangled under your nose and away . . . You scuffle with the footman for possession of your breast of guinea hen, but he bears it away in triumph, no doubt to eat it himself in the pantry.

* * * *

After a couple of bold conversational forays you find it's the gal on the right you're really after, but just as you're fusing with her the ladies are snatched away and you spend the next half hour over coffee, cognac and cigars with an economist who is passionately for or against silver, you never find out which.

* * * *

You stumble over a naval attache, a judge and a visiting novelist before you reach her side again, and at that moment the ranking guest departs, and she with him, because she happens to be his wife. . . . So you go home too, stopping for a bowl of bean bouillabaise on the way, and observing in the mirror that your white tie has slid over toward your left ear.

Dirksen Back On 2 House D.C. Groups

Minority Caucus Gives Him Places Taken by Palmisano.

Tax and Other Investigations Expected to Proceed Soon.

The way was paved yesterday for the inauguration of a District tax hearing and transit investigation next week as Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, was restored to the sub-committees that wil lconduct both inquiries.

A Republican caucus of the minority members of the House District Committee decided that Dirksen should be assigned to the ranking minority positions on the sub-committees. Chairman Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, had agreed previously to abide by the decision of the caucus.

Hearing Set Monday.

Dirksen will exchange places with Representatives Short, of Missouri, and Brewster, of Maine. Short will serve on the police and firemen subcommittee, while Brewster will go in the insurance and banking subcommittee.

Chairman Nichols, of the fiscal affairs sub-committee, announced that hearings on local taxes will begin next Monday morning and be rushed along with morning and afternoon sessions.

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, the Commissioners, the assessor, and the tax collector will be the first witnesses. Subsequently members of the special tax committee of District officials will be called to report as to their findings.

Nichols predicted that a bill will be drafted and introduced in the House within ten days, after which further hearings will be held on the measure.

D. C. Road Urged.

With Dirksen restored to the utility sub-committee, Chairman Randolph (Democrat), West Virginia, said that the inquiry probably will be resumed next week. The hearings, however, will have to be arranged so as not to conflict with the tax probe.

As forecast before Congress convened, the District yesterday was included in the benefits of the highly problematical Federal highway aid bill introduced in the House yesterday by Chairman Cartwright, of the Roads Committee.

Cartwright said that the District would get about $750,000 from the Bureau of Public Roads if the appropriation proposed is made. The measure has a rocky road ahead, however, in view of Administration demands for economy in that field.

Even if the bill becomes a law, the benefit will not accrue to the District until the fiscal year 1940, or a year from June 30, 1938.

Col. Thomas Tchou Is Due Here Today For Talk on China

Col. M. Thomas Tchou, former aide to Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, leader of Chinese armies, is expected to arrive in Washington late today for a luncheon tomorrow at the National Press Club, under the auspices of the Washington Committee for Aid to China.

Col. Tchou upon his arrival here is expected to be met by a delegation of Washington Chinese and representatives of the Washington committee. He has spent several days in New York as the guest of Chinese and American relief organizations which are assisting in raising relief funds for refugees in China. His subject at the luncheon tomorrow will be "The Crisis in China."

The Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, pastor of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, will speak briefly at the luncheon, which is open to the public. Mrs. Eugene Meyer will be chairman. There will be two guests of honor, Dr. Chengting T. Wang, the Chinese Ambassador, and Dr. Roberta Ma, American-educated Chinese woman who taught for several years at the University of Canton.

The luncheon will be 1:30 p. m.

Slum Clearance Speed Demanded

Although the Alley Dwelling Authority has been in existence more than three years, the greater part of its task of eliminating Washington's slums lies ahead. John Ihlder, executive officer told the House sub-committee on independent offices appropriations, that after spending $1,250,000, the ADA has reclaimed 11 squares. "There still are about 176 squares to do," he said.

About 100 families have been provided with homes in the renovated alley homes, Ihlder said.

Firemen Free Baby.

A truck and fire engine company responded yesterday to the pleas for help of Mrs. Herman P. Kaufman when her daughter, Harriet Ann, 2½, locked herself in the bathroom at 7208 Seventh street northwest. Members of the companies "jimmied" the lock and Harriet Ann walked free.

Butcher Fells Robber With Meat Cleaver

Police rounded up 28 robbery suspects in raids on underworld haunts last night—but it remained for Jacob Teitle, 50, a grocer, and his son, Max, to effect, with the aid of a meat cleaver, the arrest of a bandit.

Turned Over to Police.

Teitle thrust his hand into a pocket as though reaching for a gun, but whacked his fist to the man's jaw. The man fell and Teitle and his son pounced on him. Several cracks on the man's head with a meat cleaver completed his subduing.

The Teitles turned the man over to the Second Precinct police who said he gave his name as Louis Howard Cromer, 37, of Harrisonburg, Va., a former soldier.

Within an hour of the last of the raids three colored men slugged and robbed a colored messenger for G. E. Adams Co. as he was putting his motorcycle in the company garage at 641 New York avenue. The messenger, Nelson de Gore, said the men took $26 of the firm's money and $3 belonging to him. He was treated for head bruises by a Casualty Hospital physician.

The same colored man snatched the pocketbooks of Cozette Helmich, 2816 Thirteenth street northwest, at Thirteenth and Harvard streets, and Mrs. Bell Flemming, 735 Girard street northwest, at Thirteenth street and Columbia road. He obtained $8 in the first case, $10 in the second.

The round-up of robbery suspects was conducted by members of the robbery squad headed by Lieut. John Fowler in a move aimed at putting an end to a series of armed robberies by white bandits during and since the Christmas holidays.

The suspects were taken immediately to headquarters where they were fingerprinted and photographed. Their prints will be sent to the Department of Justice, as police officials believe the raiders may have rounded up wanted police characters.

Suspects to Be Viewed.

All of the suspects will be placed in a headquarters line-up tonight to be viewed by victims of scores of recent robberies.

War on Liquor Stores Backed By Conference

Efforts of four Northeast citizens' associations to prevent further issuance of liquor licenses in their area were formally indorsed last night by the Northeast Conference of Citizens Association, meeting at No. 12 Precinct.

The groups were Brookland, Bladensburg Road, Burroughs and Dahlgren Terrace.

A sales tax and real estate tax with home owners' exemption were advocated by A. F. E. Scheer, president of the conference. Scheer also called for a stronger District vagrancy law to enable police to arrest undesirable characters.

Other citizens' associations represented at the conference, in addition to those mentioned, were the Metropolis View, Lincoln Park, enilworth and RhKode Island avenue groups.

Proposed increase in the District speed limit for automobiles was attacked by the Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association last night in a resolution opposing the suggested change.

The association also recorded its opposition to diversion of $675,000 from the gasoline tax fund heretofore earmarked for highway improvement and maintenance, and decided to affiliate with the District of Columbia Suffrage Association.

Adequate Congressional appropriations to meet the needs of Gallinger Hospital were advocated by the Washington Highland Citizens Association in one of a series of resolutions dealing with municipal hospital conditions.

The association also asked for use of the Upshur Street Hospital temporarily, but not beyond 1940; admission of Gallinger patients on a cost basis at private hospitals, and facilities at Gallinger Hospital for partial payment for emergency treatment.

Miniature Coney Island Draws 'Ahs' and 'Ohs' in Basement Resort

Marjorie McConnell, 18 Months, Has Own Tiny Amusement Park

Father, Instrument Maker for Weather Bureau, Designs Lilliputan Resort—Merry-Go-Round and All.

Every day is a day of sport in the miniature as children love it for Majorie Ann McConnell, 18-month-old daughter of William C. McConnell, instrument maker for the Weather Bureau.

For McConnell has constructed a Lilliputian amusement park for his little daughter—a park run by electricity in the basement of the McConnell home at 1308 Allison street northeast.

And, at the same time, an airplane-swing whirls gayly at the other end of the park, which has been built on a table. Peering at the midway, the tiny figures and the replica of spangleland, little Majorie and the neighborhood children say:

"Ah!"

And the grown-ups, with the same enthusiasm they show for electric trains, crowd around.

McConnell began constructing the amusement park just after Christmas, 1936. He worked in the basement secretly for an entire year. Often Marjorie wondered why her father stole down the cellar stairs so mysteriously.

This Christmas morning she was taken to the basement, the buttons were pressed and the little amusement park came to life.

Besides the merry-go-round and the airplane swing, the set consists of a midway, a midway house, the figures of men and women and children enjoying a day's outing, a parking lot, lights which go on and off at will, benches and trees.

"We'll add a piece a year to the little park," said McConnell last night. "Some day we'll have a modern little Coney Island — perhaps with even the hot dog stands. It is great fun. Just as Marjorie Ann——"

Flight Experts Note Big Increase In Airships' Size

Great increases in the size of flying boats are noted in the twenty-third annual report of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, just made public.

The research organization declared that "designers are discussing with confidence the construction of flying boats of magnitudes that would have been considered impracticable a few years ago and are looking forward to the construction of even larger and faster flying boats within a relatively short time."

Calling attention to the "greatly increased interest of the major powers in fostering aeronautical research and their determined efforts to excell in this rapidly advancing engineering science," Joseph S. Ames, chairman, in his letter transmitting the report to President Roosevelt, asked for continuance of the "liberal and farsighted support of the President and of the Congress" in the research work of the N. A. C. A.

The committee drew attention to the importance of the aircraft production industry in national defense and said that "a healthy nucleus of an aircraft industry capable of rapid expansion in time of need is essential to our national defense."

Amelia Earhart Memorial Light Corner Stone Laid

The corner stone has been laid for the Amelia Earhart Lighthouse on Howland Island, in mid-Pacific, toward which she was flying when lost, Ernest Gruening, director, division of territories and island possessions, reported yesterday to the Interior Department.

The 20-foot lighthouse will stand on the highest point of land on the country's most recent territorial acquisition, 25 feet above sea level. It will blink every 4 seconds on radio request from ships.

Traffic Cautions Stressed in Speech By Capt. Callahan

Although the automobile fatality rate increased 5 per cent throughout the Nation last year, deaths among children up to high school age decreased, Capt. Harvey Callahan, commander of the First Police Precinct, told a luncheon meeting of the Cosmopolitan Club yesterday.

Discussing the various phases of traffic control and accident prevention, Capt. Callahan stressed the need for pedestrian regulations. He said a person who would not drive his or her car through a red light now thinks nothing of stepping from the curb against improper signals.

The Police Department, he said, is educating its members as to certain dangerous crossings in the city and plans are under way to apply remedies.

There is "very little" so-called ticket fixing within the department, Capt Callahan told the meeting. In cases of mistakes, he added, necessary adjustments are made. He concluded with an appeal to the public for co-operation in current efforts to save lives and reduce accidents.

Dr. Joseph L. B. Murray, new president of the Cosmopolitan Club, was installed at yesterday's meeting. Other officers installed were A. Hamilton Wilson, vice president; Milton Hartley, treasurer; Michael D. Schafer, secretary.

House D.C. Unit Given Data on Hospital Plans

Sub-committee Hears Testimony on New Tuberculosis Ward.

The House sub-committee on District appropriations yesterday deliberated and took testimony as to whether it would be better to build a new tuberculosis ward at Gallinger Hospital or at the sanatoria at Glenn Dale.

Dr. Edgar Bocock, superintendent of the hospital, described the present crowded conditions and inadequate quarters for tubercular patients at the hospital.

Many of the patients now occupy quarters built before the Civil War, he said.

Some members of the sub-committee, however, were inclined to believe that the extra ward should be built at Glenn Dale so that all District tubercular patients could be together.

Health Department officials testified that the Budget Bureau's recommendation that 58 additional employes be allowed Gallinger is sufficient.

Later in the day the sub-committee began taking testimony on the estimates of the Welfare Department, but it did not reach the controversial unemployed relief topic.

Public Welfare Director Elwood Street headed the witnesses and today he plans to make another plea for a larger relief appropriation and funds to care for destitute employables.

The Budget Bureau not only refused to recommend any money for employables but it cut the fund for unemployables by $400,000 and proposed to slash the staff of the public assistance division by two-thirds.

School Fund Doubt Denied by Ballou

Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou yesterday stated he had no reason to believe Congress will not make the necessary appropriation to provide the $100,000 annual increase for salaries of teachers who have not yet reached the maximum salary.

The appropriation was approved by the commissioners, and by the Bureau of the Budget, and is now before the House Committee on Appropriations, Ballou stated.

Dr. Ballou said, "In this morning's Washington Post I am incorrectly quoted with respect to what I said before the Public School Association meeting last night at the District Building. I did not undertake to discuss the 1939 budget in my talk last night."

Citizens Urge All Cabmen Be Finger-Printed

Safety Committee Would Guard Against Drivers With Crime Records.

All taxi drivers in the District should be finger-printed, in order that it may be determined they have no criminal records, the safety committee of the Federation of Citizens' Associations recommended last night. The recommendation will be presented at the next meeting of the Federation.

The group, in session at the Woodward Building, with Harry Wender, as chairman, also recommended that the speed limit be increased from 22 to 25 miles per hour and 30 to 35 miles per hour in certain zones where such action has been approved by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer.

The committee held that the safety zones now are inadequate throughout the city, and that the Capital Transit Co. should be ordered, if it is legally possible, to erect modern, elevated, lighted zones, "similar to those at Seventh and F streets northwest" wherever congested conditions warrant.

Other recommendations made by the committee included enforcement of pedestrian control on walk-lights, with penalties for jay-walking; staggering the hours of school children to avoid the traffic rush hours in the morning; and abolition of parking of vans on New York avenue, between New Jersey avenue and M streets northwest.

Traffic Director Van Duzer attended the early part of the meeting. He told of the governor system, installed on the cars of offenders whose driving licenses have been suspended and who need their cars to earn a livelihood.

The committee voted approval of the governors, which would be optional with the offenders and used only in case of employment necessity.

Building Forecast For Security Board

Another Federal building, to house the Social Security Board, probably will be authorized by the present Congress, Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the House sub-committee on independent offices appropriations, indicated yesterday.

"I feel I have the right to say that the President personally feels that it is extremely important to provide housing facilities for this activity in Washington," he said during hearings on the independent offices supply bill.

The original authorization probably will be $3,000,000, Woodrum said.

Parks Group Gets $625,000 In '39 Budget

Proposed Amount Gives D. C. Four Projects Long Asked.

Fort Drive Completion, Many Playgrounds Provided For.

An appropriation of $625,000, the amount recommended by the Budget Bureau, was proposed for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday in the independent offices supply bill reported to the House.

Four projects will be made possible by the appropriation, which is $268,700 under the 1938 amount. They are:

1. Acquire remaining land necessary to complete the Fort Drive, at estimated cost of $109,399.

2. Acquire land for small recreation centers in the outlying sections of the city, $124,407.

3. Acquire or enlarge three existing playgrounds in congested area, $285,818.

4. Make further land purchases or complete projects already started in parks and parkways, $78,537.

The three playgrounds to be improved in the heart of the city are not specified, but Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the commission, in a report placed in the record stated:

"Unfortunately, many parts of the District were built up before any comprehensive recreation system had been planned for these sections, some of which are the most congested of the city.

"In these areas, juvenile delinquency is high, tuberculosis and other diseases flourish, and are a drain upon the District budget. The commission, therefore, proposes, as a public necessity, that three playgrounds in congested areas be enlarged."

The closing of the gap of Fort Drive, Delano said will 'provide much needed cross-town connections, as well as realize a city-wide scenic and historis parkway."

Purchase of small recreation center sites in outyling sections of the District he said, should be made while the cost of these lands is "relatively low."

Civil Service Work Triples Since 1932

The work of the United States Civil Service Commission has increased from 100 to 300 per cent in many divisions since 1932, commission officials told the House sub-committee on independent offices appropriations, printed hearing reports disclosed yesterday.

Applications have jumped from 221,494 in 1932 to 934,068 in the fiscal year 1937. Examinations increased from 261,068 to 843,887, and appointments in classified service from 21,499 to 52 383.

'Blues' Mandatory For Army Officers

By the Associated Press.

Maybe Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican), Massachusetts, put a bee in the steel helmet of the War Department by introducing a bill for the survival of blue uniforms for doughboys—or maybe she didn't.

At any rate the War Department has issued strict orders that officers must wear full-dress blue uniforms at the President's receptions at the White House, rescinding a previous order of only two months ago.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Tense Emotional Relationship Develops Between Married Pastor, Church Worker; Latter Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I feel you are the only one who can help me in solving my problem. I am a very good church worker; was brought up in church. For several years the man I fell in love with has been pastoring at my church. When he first came to this church I had no idea of falling in love with him. Of course, I admired him, but I didn't love him. He would often tell me how sweet I was and how well I could put programs over. He was not married then, but he got married later.

* * * *

Now, I don't know how it happened, but I fell in love with him. Some time ago he called me up; asked me over for lunch. I went. When I got there, his wife was away. He told me how much he loved me; how much he cared for me. Therefore, I told him how much I loved him. He calls me every day; tells me how he longs to hold me and tell me of his love for me. One day he couldn't call because his wife was home and he told me the next day he almost went crazy. He asked me if I thought we were sinning, loving each other, and him married. I told him I didn't think it was a sin if you love someone to be with that person. Am I right, Miss Haworth?

* * * *

Now, the only time we see each other is one afternoon a week—I mean, to be together. I am so afraid someone will find it out. I don't want to disgrace him in the position he has. He even took the chance of calling me one day when his wife was home and said, "Darling, I have got to see you." I told him please not to call me while his wife is there and hung up. Miss Haworth, I love him truly, but what should I do? There is no future there for me. Should I try to forget him? I have tried, but can't. I have even told him I thought I was too young for him but he said age doesn't matter in love. I have found it out, too. Do you think he really and truly loves me? Please give me some advice. I will gladly follow it. Thanking you so much, ANONYMOUS.

* * * *

The Thing to Do.

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Perhaps, as a child, you read the fable of Red Riding Hood and the Wolf. Red Riding Hood, you may recall, was a defenselessly naive and credulous youngster who narrowly escaped coming to a very bad end indeed as a result of listening to the blandishments of the Wolf. Your present dilemma is very like hers. This pastor is a wolf in sheep's clothing; a moral hypocrite of the worst sort; one of those of whom it has been said (see Luke, 17:2) "It were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he cast into the sea, than that he should offend one of these little ones."

* * * *

As presumable Christians, who supposedly accept the writings of the New Testament as the literal word of God, it seems to me that both of you should realize the grievous import of your dalliance; should realize that you are breaking two of the Ten Commandments, those which treat of adultery and covetousness. For, in Matthew, 5:28, we are told "That whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart." It seems to me that there you have the church's answer to the minister's question to you, namely, "Are we sinning, loving each other, and me married?"

* * * *

There is nothing spiritual or idealistic, brotherly or fatherly, benevolent or altruistic, about the love of a married man for a maid, when that love is expressed in selfish, physical, anti-social terms. It is sheer animalism, unleashed without regard for spiritual and social consequences; and the burden of wrong-doing rests with the aggressor, who is, in this instance, a middle-aged married man, who might be said to be almost diabolically preying upon the romantic susceptibilities of a mere girl.

* * *

This preacher's moral crime is the more heinous in its outrageous hypocrisy. Posing before the world as a man of God, furtively he is engaged in evil work, in purveying temptation calculated to despoil the innocence and disrupt the integrity of a worshipfully trustful young girl who had looked upon him as a fountainhead of moral guidance and spiritual uplift. He is making you an accomplice to the offense he commits against his high vocation, against the laws of Christian morality he is pledged to exemplify and against his wife. He knows this. He knows, moreover, that he is committing moral mayhem against you—to a far greater extent than you are committing the same crime against him—in drugging your conscience with honeyed words and fevered embraces, while he involves you ever more deeply, socially and emotionally in this illicit relationship. And because he, the teacher, is willfully and consciously leading you, the disciple, astray, he is a deep-dyed sinner in any man's language, be that man pagan, agnostic, atheist, infidel or true believer.

* * * *

In my opinion, the most revolting, the most intolerable of all moral crimes is that which has to do with age's despoliation, in any form or manner, of the innocence of youth. And this is the attempted crime with which I charge your pastor. Such a man, I make bold to say, is a moral leper, no less. You should flee his embraces and avoid his company as you would that of an actual leper if you were not thoroughly safeguarded against pollution. For the time being, your moral and emotional defences are down in this association. You are not fundamentally safeguarded from such defilement of mind, spirit, emotion and reputation as might leave a lasting stain or scar. Therefore, your only salvation lies in breaking off the personal relationship, in putting all possible distance—socially and psychically—between yourself and your tempter.

* * * *

You have asked my advice. You have said you "will gladly follow it." And there you have it. There is no easier, compromising alternative. In parentheses I might add that the man does not "really and truly love" you. He lusts after you only. Genuine love reveals itself in earnestly unselfish efforts to promote the best welfare of the beloved. Did this man love you, he would not—for the transitory gratification of inordinate sensual desire—recklessly expose your name to scandal, your soul to darkness, and your mind to tortured perplexity.

* * * *

Don't go to this man's house again, ever, in the absence of his wife. Indeed, I recommend that you sever all contact with him, even of the most casual sort. It will aid you in forgetting—since forget you must. Since desperate diseases require desperate remedies, the real and lasting solution of this acute situation will be found in transferring your membership to another church; and, if at all possible, in changing your residence as well. Don't be afraid of "what people will say." There is probably more gossip already than you realize. But so long as you have had the courage to face this problem unflinchingly, to ask for guidance, and to be willing to act upon it, your moral obligation has been met; and your atonement will have been rendered in conscientiously avoiding the occasion of temptation hereafter. You owe no explanation to anyone and it would be a mistake to offer it. In the words of George Washington, "Labour to keep alive in your breast that little spark of celestial fire—conscience," follow its guidance (as you have done in seeking disinterested advice in this instance), go your own way and keep your own counsel. M. H.

Almonized Kid Gloves to Protect Hands

TO KEEP your hands soft and white this winter, in spite of cold winds, harsh soaps and the like, there are some very smart looking gloves which have been treated with almond oil and glycerine. Newleyweds in Hungary Leave Chores to Mother

Vienna—"Life With Mother" may be only a popular book in America, but it's a popular custom in Decs, Hungary, according to W. Seiler, manager of the American Express Travel Service, who reports that young newlyweds in that village live with mother after the marriage ceremony, and even let her do much of the household work.

Local tradition holds that young married couples should be free to enjoy themselves. The bride, therefore, is not expected to do housework until her mother-in-law dies, and with good luck, she need not bake, clean or cook until well into middle life.

Fewer Dresses, Varying Accents Are Prophesied

An 'Accessory' Spring Is Forecast by Designer.

WITH fashion forecasts filling the air, Milo Anderson, Warner Brothers, designer, comes through with this vignette of the mode:

"Before the feminine world lies an accessory spring . . . The woman who knows will have fewer dresses this year than ever before . . . But they will be of a better quality and extremely simple . . . Every time a dress appears in public it will have a new disguise . . . It will wear a dashing bolero or a demure one, a winding sash, a startling belt, a shocking bandanna, amazing gauntlet gloves, barbaric costume jewelry or a Robin Hood tabard.

Milo proves the truth of what he says by doing a "seven-day" costume for Mary Maguire. The basic dress is a black crepe floor-length gown with suspender top. Milo has supplied Mary with enough changes so she can go dancing every night in the same dress with its seven disguises and nobody will recognize it.

One novel addition is a black and white striped Basque fisherman sweater with sleeves pushed up, worn with a gold cross. Another is a minty green crepe sports blouse with elbow-length sleeves and John Barrymore collar. This same combination can appear the next day with the addition of a white pique vest. The fourth evening Mary can tie a gay bandanna through the suspenders to form a tricky bodice and another time this costume can pass when topped by a red suede bolero. For occasions demanding an extreme decollete Mary can use a wide metal cloth stole for the front bodice, leaving the back bare. The last disguise is a wide green suede belt with hanging pockets worn with the metallic stole.

Informal Trends In Clothes Noted

Rainbow Room Maitre Finds Tails Are Scarce.

New York, (AP).—Thumbnail interview with Francois Kelz, maitre d'hotel at the Rainbow Room, who's probably seen more dressed-up people than anybody in the business (20-odd years at Meurice's in Paris, the Princess in London, the Savoy Plaza and the Ritz Carleton).

He finds the dinner jacket a 3-to-1 favorite over ffull dress in the sixty-fifth floor night club these days. Thinks tails beter only at extra-formal occasions like State dinners, opera and the Horse Show.

Thinks the current trend toward less formal evening dress was brought on by the speakeasy era. Now "nobody eats those big formal dinners any more—it's the 'snack' now. Stop at a bar, grab a bite, food in one hand, cigarette in the other—everybody's in a hurry."

Francois' favorite guest—Arthur Brisbane, who was always well-dressed except that he'd never wear a stiff collar—thought they interfered with the blood circulation.

Francois spots a well-dressed man by the fit of his clothes—the other kind come in covered with wrinkles, shirt sticking out from vest, or tails too short.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

by Logan Clendening, M. D.

Gargling is the most popular method of local treatment in sore throat and colds. Its popularity rests on the fact that you can do it yourself. In fact, like blowing your nose, nobody else can do it for you.

The first ultrascientific investigater of gargling was an X-ray man by the name of Haase. He took X-ray pictures of people gargling with an opaque fluid—a barium suspension such as is used in examination of the stomach, and reported that the gargling fluid does not reach the tonsils or the back of the soft palate.

His findings were confirmed by Snow and Stern in New York, who used the same method and found that during gargling the tongue is firmly pressed against the soft palate in such a way that liquid cannot reach the back regions of the throat.

Then came a Dr. Walker, of London, who reported an investigation in which he had ten patients gargle with a solution of methylene blue. An examination made immediately afterward showed that in no case had the fluid reached the tonsils, the back of the soft palate or the back of the throat. From this, he said, he reached the conclusion that gargling was an entirely inadequate means of introducing an antiseptic medication to the tonsils or palate.

So much for the evidence against gargling.

In defense there came Dr. Kounitz, of New York, who replied to the X-ray men that there was a good deal simpler way of finding whether a solution of barium, which is visible as a white paste to the eye, has reached the parts of the throat intended, and that is by looking in the throat after the gargle. If anyone will take the trouble to examine the throat of a person who has just gargled with a suspension of barium, he will find that every part of the mouth and throat, including the tonsils, the soft palate and the pharynx, is coated. With the "commotion that occurs" during gargling, can anything else be expected?.

His reply to the methylene blue experiments is that you cannot make methylene blue stick to tonsils or the soft palate. It will dye the tongue, but that is all. Therefore, the methylene blue experiments are entirely discredited.

Finally, we have the advice of Dr. H. L. Swain, of New Haven, that the thing that is needed is instruction in expert gargling. His advice is that "the person should first swallow the fluid he is about to gargle, with the mouth wide open, head well back, and then gargle it around, as is the usual practice, as long as his breath will permit."

The point seems to be that it is unnecessary to make the many melodious sounds as of a babbling brook in a great hurry, in order to do good gargling, but to move the fluid around as much as possible with the muscles of the throat and then, as you let the air bubbles come through, throw the head forward so that some of the fluid will go out through the nose so that, in this one comprehensive act, you will reach the mouth, pharynx, throat and all the accessible parts of the nose.

The purpose of gargling is not so much to introduce an antiseptic fluid as to introduce a hot fluid and produce counter-irritation and thus relieve inflammation as we do with hot-water bags and all other forms of heat.

The best solution for gargling is the simplest—hot salt solution.

The final judgment as to whether your gargling does any good is whether it makes you more comfortable or not.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Science of Exercising Can Provide Reductions or Additions.

By Ida Jean Kain.

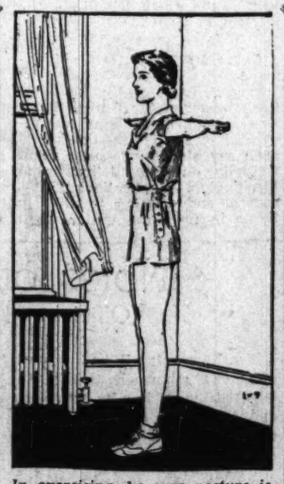
THE REAL problem with most figures is how to reduce in some spots and to develop in others, but exercise is now down to a science whereby you can add curves or reduce bulges, or both.

With a program of specific exercise you can reduce or develop the upper arms, strengthen the muscles which support the bust, slim the waist and hips and reduce or develop the legs. That may sound complicated, but it's all in knowing the best mechanical positions for putting these various muscle groups to work.

You may use your arms a great deal and they may still lack firm, rounded contours. Ordinary arm movements require the use of only the front muscles, and to tone the muscles on the backs of the arms you must exercise in one of two positions. The arms may be exercised at shoulder level or thrust outward from the shoulders. Try these positions and you can feel the pull on these muscles in the backs of the arms. Consistent exercise will reduce or develop the arms as needed and will firm and smooth the contours.

Since the pectoral muscles supporting the bust are inserted in the upper arms, it is easy to understand why arm exercises also strengthen the muscles of the chest. You will derive a double benefit from any arm exercises in which the arms are moved in circles, raised overhead or pushed against resistance.

At the same time you are strengthening the muscles of the bust, you may save part of your exercise time for stretching, twisting and bending movements which take inches off the waistline. To strengthen the abdominal muscles, the best position is flat on the back, knees flexed, feet flat on the floor.



In exercising, be sure posture is correct.

It takes exercise of an entirely different type to affect the size of the hipline. This measurement yields most readily to swinging exercises in which the leg is kicked back ward to an angle of 45 degrees. The big fleshy muscles on the back of the hips are also brought into action in outward rotation of the leg from the hip joint. Perhaps the easiest

In beautifying the thighs you must do those exercises which flex the knees and move the legs in outward and inward circles.

As to exercise rules . . . there are only three to remember. You should always exercise in perfect posture and should correct your posture at the beginning of each exercise. Exercise in a gym suit or other suitable clothing—don't try to exercise in a dress! You may exercise in a room that is comfortably warm, but have the windows open to provide plenty of fresh air. You use more oxygen when you are using your muscles.

If you will keep these three rules in mind and take advantage of the correct exercise positions, you can change your measurements to suit yourself.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Jan. 6.

OUR EYES and ears are filled with this word "recession," which at least is a faint change from the horrid word which dominated the country after '29. And yet, as I contemplate the enormous series of glittering debutantes parties which have jammed the holiday period, I can't help wondering what has "recessed" save pocketbooks of thousands of forgotten men.

ALICE HUGHES.

Many of these deb orgies have been extraordinarily lavish, invariably reminding the mere bystander of Imperial Rome just as she began to totter on her seven hills. By common consent of the knowing, the ball which launched Miss Nancy Van Vleck on the tossing social seas was one of the most novel, not to say costly, in the history of the local Social Register, even in times when the stock market was sky-hooting upward. Such didoes fascinates the modest onlooker!

Nancy's lady mother, Mrs. William Atkinson, took over the Waldorf-Astoria for the emergency, and decided on a supper dance. Mr. Vernon McFarlane, locally famed as a night-club decorator, was hired to fix up the place, and he did it with thousands of yards of cellophane and festoons of pastel Neon lights, a little too quiet for Broadway, but ducky for a debut. Chromium fountains were set up to shoot spray into the glow of the lights. There were 12 lucky-number dances for the assembled youth and chivalry; gold vanities for the maidens; gold lighters for the lightfooted lads. And the stupendous climax of the gala came when the lights were dimmed and the debutante's name was spelled out in lights, just like a movie star's over the corner theater, but much bigger.

The analogy is good—it was a super-terrific production, fit for any screen. The thousands it must have run to! But what matter? Nancy was launched!

* * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—There was a slight but exciting flutter at a recent swanky night club opening here, which delighted those present. Entertaining was the famed mimic, Sheila Barrett, who did her devastating impression of Tallulah Bankhead. And who, of course, was sitting at the ringside but Talloo herself, with her new husband! Well, that couldn't pass. When it was over, Talloo went onto the floor and thanked Sheila in her best Bankheadian barytone, adding a barb that must have quivered in Barrett's fair flesh for several days.

* * *

It is such trifles as these, I am told, that keep nightclubbing from being the really appalling bore it seems. But they happen so seldom! Why, there's almost never a really good fight among the boys in white ties and claw-hammer claws. A soft race, this! . . .

* * * *

More live stock has poured into this apartment than ever before. The invasion began with a living duck, quickly followed by a huge turkey, already roasted and well-stuffed. Next to arrive, from a famous shoemaker who also hunts, were three wild ducks ready for the oven. Never has my household wrestled with so much fowl. But it's over now, and Mr. Greenbaum can begin sending me the conventional lamb chops! . . .

* * * *

There is quite a large group of beautiful, busy, jolly girls here—good to look at and good catches—who seem to fight off matrimony astonishingly. I think of such friends as Katharine Vincent, blonde, and Gloria Braggiotti, fashion editors, and Anne Goodman, whose father owns one of the smartest and most famous emporia on the avenue. I often wonder why this devotion to single cussedness. Can it be that they are too tall? They are all very lofty.

* * * *

Among my nicer and more interesting presents during the recent hullabaloo was a Cellophane umbrella with a pigskin handle. Not like the old days of the black cotton bumbershoot with the pine handle, eh?

Simple Make-up Is a Necessity Of Modern Girl

She Is Too Busy to Be Artful, Says Julie Haydon, Actress.

By Nancy Archibald.

JULIE HAYDON, who made her great success playing opposite Noel Coward in "The Scoundrel" and now is at the National with Sir Cedric Hardwicke in "Shadows and Substance," is a "natural." That is to say, this rising young actress who grew up in Hollywood believes in simplicity, wearing little or no makeup and often going out with her golden hair streaming about her shoulders like Alice-in-Wonderland.

"It isn't that I object to heavy makeup and sophisticated styles," she explained at dinner last night at the Hay-Adams House, "but I just don't have time to think out studied effects. There are so many things involved in a play, especially a new one that still is in the process of creation, so to speak, as "Shadows and Substance" is, that I have all I can do to concentrate on my performance and do my regular exercises without trying to work out a glamour system.

"I imagine most modern girls are the same," Julie continued, "a career or charity enterprise or study of any kind absorbs so much time that they are impatient with too much formality. I don't mean that they don't dress smartly. It is a real art to wear clothes casually without looking sloppy. I adore these foolish hats they are wearing this season, and often pin some bright flowers on my little red beret to enliven my black costume. My only sadness again is lack of time for shopping."

Miss Haydon keeps trim (she is naturally slender) with morning and evening exercises. She also cares for her voice as much as her figure, taking breathing exercises and practicing enunciation exercises religiously every day. Her exercises keep a delightfully healthy twinkle in her gray-blue eyes that no artful makeup could ever achieve. Secretly, while the natural type is admirable, we thought Miss Haydon looked even more dashing when she was on the stage in full theatrical makeup.

Know Your Stuff, C.B.S. Expert Tells Girl Job Seekers

"Know your stuff." It's not a breezy recipe for getting more dates; just good sound advice for landing a job packed into very few words by Mary Margaret McBride, Columbia Broadcasting System columnist of the air.

Because thousands of women write to ask her job-getting technique, Miss McBride has interviewed some of New York's leading businessmen to learn what they seek in a prospective employe.

Every employer told the radio columnist how important it is to "know your stuff." That's the way they describe a nice balance between modesty and confidence, an approach characterized by poise and assurance. It means knowing your assets and being able to present them clearly and convincingly, but it doesn't mean telling your life history or giving yourself a super sales talk.

Never tell an executive that you're "willing to do anything." To him that means you probably can't do anything very well. By studying yourself and your qualifications for the job, you can headline your own abilities and be ready to tell your prospective employer exactly why you fit into the job and into his organization. Remember that he can get general training and general ability almost anywhere. It's the individual talent, personality and specialized training he wants and is willing to pay for.

Vice President and Mrs. Garner Break Their Rigid Rule To Be the Guests of Honor at Dinner at the White House

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

The Vice President and Mrs. John Nance Garner last night broke their rigid rule against dining out—to add another chapter to the social history of the White House.

Having proved last season that at least one official family can forego official feting—and being feted—the Garners decided this year that they might as well come back into the social picture. So last night, when the President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained at dinner, the Vice President and his wife were in the seats of honor, breaking bread with 85 other guests, including Senators and Representatives; topflight representatives of the Army and Navy; a scattering of out-of-towners; William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and at least one "economic royalist," Mrs. Joseph Leiter.

The horseshoe table was laid with china and glass of historic interest, and decorated with the handsome mirrored plateaus, epergnes and floral pieces fashioned of pink carnations, Buddleia and maidenhair fern.

After the dinner, guests proceeded to the East Room, where Mme. Elisabeth Schumann, soprano, and Percy Grainger, composer-pianist presented a program.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson Is Among Guests

The guest list, drawn heavily from the Congressional Directory, included, in addition to the Vice President and Mrs. Garner, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Senator and Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Senator Pat Harrison, Senator and Mrs. Robert M. La Follette, jr., Senator Alben W. Barkley, Senator Robert F. Wagner, Senator and Mrs. Robert J. Bulkley, Senator and Mrs. James F. Byrnes, Senator Hattie W. Caraway, Senator and Mrs. Alva B. Adams, Senator and Mrs. William H. Dietrich, Senator and Mrs. F. Ryan Duffey, Senator and Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, Senator and Mrs. Elbert D. Thomas, Senator and Mrs. Guy M. Gillette and Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper.

From the other side of Congress came 15 Representatives, several with their wives. In this group were Representative and Mrs. Edward T. Taylor, Representative Allen T. Treadway, Representative and Mrs. Clarence F. Lea, Representative and Mrs. Schuyler Otis Bland, Representative and Mrs. Frank Crowther, Representative and Mrs. T. Alan Goldsborough, Representative and Mrs. Luther A. Johnson, Representative Lindsay C. With Dudley Harmon.

IN CASE the public is getting a bit tired of the style of this column, day in and day out, six times a week, we propose to give our readers a little variety. We therefore present them with accounts of a cocktail party in Washington as Heywood Broun, Walter Lippmann, Dorothy Thompson and Westbrook Pegler might have covered it had they been society writers instead of commentators on weightier subjects.

First we present Heywood Broun:

• • • •

STAMFORD—Digging out of my igloo on Hunting Ridge road in this section of the North Countree, I put on my skis and went over to a cocktail party at the Joneses. Under my arm I carried several copies of the New York Herald Tribune in case my hosts should need some dry material to start a fire with.

In the living room I pointedly ignored several mink-coated members of the moneyed classes and paused only long enough to grab a whisky before continuing into the kitchen. There, proceeding to make myself comfortable by the stove, I began to investigate the working conditions of the help. The butler looked tired and the waitress seemed pale. They were pretty busy with sandwiches and highballs, but I nevertheless managed to hold their attention with a few illuminating comments on the more alarming aspects of the situation.

AND NOW for Walter Lippmann:

In perusing recently the latest fiscal report of the United States Government, this column was reminded of the lavish—one might even say staggering—sums spent annually on cocktail parties in Washington. Implications of this current and ominous trend were borne in upon the writer when he attended such an affair given yesterday by the Joneses.

The varying aspects of the party were disquieting when regarded in the light of all known human experience. First, the very punch itself held grave economic implications. The writer could clearly taste the influence of California grape, leading unmistakably to the conclusion that the Japanese boycott is moving with telling effect. Had this writer tasted Japanese juices in the punch, the order of his conclusion would have been reversed: it would have been clearly demonstrated that the boycott was not involving our Western Coast.

(Editor's note: we regret that the other 5,000 words of Mr. Lippmann's column had to be cut owing to space considerations.)

• • • •

Are we or are we not living under a democratic form of government—socially, I mean? This question suddenly occurred to me yesterday in the midst of a cocktail party at the Joneses.

In the opinion of this column, certain hostesses in Washington are trying to set up something resembling a dictatorship. In doing so, their actions smack ominously of those certain Europeans whom I shall not name. The arbitrary whims of such women are not to be condoned, showing, as they do, a marked drift toward that most dangerous of American menaces—fascism.

• • • •

WESTBROOKS PEGLER'S typewriter might have dealt thus with the Joneses.

I hate cocktail parties, but I love cocktails.
I hate cocktail parties, but I love cocktails.
I hate cocktail parties, but I love cocktails.
I hate cocktail parties, but I love cocktails.
I hate cocktail parties, but I love cocktails.

Presidents' Wives and Queens Grace (by Proxy) Velvet Ball

Mrs. Roosevelt, However, Impersonates Herself in One Pageant as Society's Cream Buys School Children Lunches.

By Elizabeth Ford.

Mrs. Roosevelt last evening impersonated herself by standing up in her box at the Velvet Ball and taking a bow during the pageant of Presidents' wives. She wore black velvet in off-the-shoulder style.

The affair took place at the Mayflower for the benefit of the free-lunch fund for school children, and included not only the pageant, but a bridal procession, a marionette show and mock turtle en tasse on the buffet menu at midnight.

Those in the fashion parade who ran the gamut of lorgnettes were Miss Emily Lewis rustis Stevens, of New York, who is the great-great-great-niece of George Washington's sister, Betty Lewis, and who appeared as Martha Washington; Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., as Dolly Madison; Miss Marthena Williams, great-great-granddaughter of President Harrison, as Marie Monroe, daughter of James Monroe; Mrs. Claude Pepper as Mrs. John Quincy Adams; Miss Elizabeth Burton, a debutante of this year, as Mrs. Ulysses S. Grant; Miss Christine Ekengren, as a very dashing Mrs. William McKinley; Mrs. Henri de Sibour as the daughter-in-law of Martin Van Buren; Mrs. George A. Allen as Harriet Johnston, niece of James Buchanan, and many others.

English Queens Are Portrayed

Among the Queens of England, (appearing in textbook order) were Miss Laura Tuckerman as the wife of Edward III; Miss Anne Child as the wife of Henry IV; Mrs. Reginald Meade, who took a breathing spell from the Junior League to impersonate Katherine Parr, one of the wives of Henry VIII; Miss Eleanor Flood as Jane Grey; Miss Frances Andrews as the feminine half of the William and Mary combination; Mrs. McKenney Mallan as Queen Anne; Mrs. Francis Whitten as the wife of George II; Miss Margot Garrett as the wife of George III; Miss Alice Tuckerman as the wife of George IV; Miss Angelica Lloyd, as Queen Alexandra, and Miss Carolyn Chantry as Queen Mary (without the hat.)

Although Mrs. Edward Beale McLean was unable to attend, among guests in her box were the Misses Ann and Eleanor Meem, in black velvet dresses with close-fitting bodices and full skirts terminating in trains.

With Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, the latter wearing a purple gown trimmed with little gold flowers, were the Austrian Minister and Mme. Prochnik; the Yugoslav Minister's wife, Mme. Fotitch; Senator and Mrs. William H. King, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. Joseph Washington and her son, George Washington, of New York; Mrs. Ronald Fairfax, of Roanoke, Va., and Mrs. Robert Hollister Chapman.

Mrs. Robert Is Hostess to Seven

With Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., were Capt. Lawrence Wood Robert, sr., and Pierce Robert, of Atlanta, Ga.; Frank Robert, Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Walker. Returning very late yesterday afternoon from Middleburg, where they had been hunting, Mr. and Mrs. George Angus Garrett made the ball by the skin of their teeth.

To the tune of "Oh Promise Me," sung by Miss Marie Sauter the climax of the evening arrived—the wedding procession, in which Mrs. Robert E. Moran, Miss Anne Kiess, Miss Rosemary Newman, Miss Helen Beatty, Miss Eleanor Elliott and Miss Mary Putnam, took part.

Miss Jane Rust, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Rust, jr., was chairman of the program committee, with five able assistants—the Misses Jacqueline Moderith, Charlotte Burchell, Nancy Rheem, Patricia Boyle and Mercedes Boyle.

Yule Greens At University Club Burned

Twelfth Night Dinner Features Serving of Bouillabaisse.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

"Welcome the wine, whate'er the seal is; and sit you down and say your grace
With thankful heart, whate'er the meal is. Here comes the smoking bouillabaisse."

Members of the American Association of University Women last night combined French and English traditions, celebrating Twelfth Night with a dinner of bouillabaisse, and festivities following which wound up with the English custom of burning the Christman greens.

Mrs. Robert Olesen, first vice president of the club, and Dr. Olesen, presided as king and queen of the revels. They were escorted up the broad staircase to the dining room on the second floor by three heralds, Mrs. Leslie H. Whitten, chairman of hospitality, who, with Mrs. Horace Torbert, chairman of program, arranged the affair; Mrs. Thomas D. Lewis, assistant chairman of hospitality, and Mrs. Earl Trager, publicity chairman for the club. Mr. and Mrs. Olesen wore high, peaked hats of rose and gold and the heralds, green ones. Their entrance was announced to the assembled guests by the sound of gongs.

Bouillabaisse, described by Thackeray in a gay poem, the last lines of which are quoted above, comprised the meal. It was served in bowls and consisted of rice and various kinds of fish. When it had been cleared away, the heralds led the serving maids in a procession from the kitchen, carrying cakes held high over the heads of the company. Their entrance was accompanied by music and applause. Although the guests were not in costume, bright little carnival hats gave the illusion of a real old-fashioned Twelfth Night festival.

When the cakes had been served and eaten, the heralds and king and queen led the "noble assembly" downstairs to the "royal playhouse," where a play, "Punch and Judy of Long Ago," was presented under the direction of Miss Eleanor Williams. It was a puppet show, with members of the players' group of the club impersonating the puppets.

Nancy Hoar had the role of Punch, wearing a white costume with black trimming; Floreine Hurley, was resplendent in silks and a golden crown as the king; Anna Marie Ketchum was the officer, a sturdy and efficient individual whose disposition was as violent as his red hair; Mrs. W. H. McKinney had the impressive role of the doctor, one of the prisoners; Mary Vaccaro, that of the clown, another of the prisoners, and Marjorie Hull, in alluring white, that of Judy, the third prisoner.

Ruby Streeter, in a robe of solemn black, was the waiting executioner and Virginia Anderson served as the trumpeter. Miss Streeter was also responsible for the striking costumes in the production.

The play was presented in the lounge with a large lighted Christmas tree as part of the setting. Later the rooms were cleared for square dances for which Miss Eugenia Botkin, violinist, and Miss Katherine Murray, pianist, played, while Mrs. Willed S. Crane called the figures.

When the dancers showed signs of fatigue, the greens were burned with fitting ceremony to the singing of "Tannenbaum, O Tannenbaum."

Among the guests at the party was Mrs. Richard Houge, president of the club, who wore a colorful India print gown and a little bell-boy carnival hat of blue and gold which harmonized as though it had been made to match the costume. She also carried a matching bag. Also present were Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith, Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler and Miss Mattie Richards Tyler, who came together; Mr. and Mrs. William Taylor, Mrs. Lawrence Radford, Mrs. Noble Boaz, recording secretary of the club, with Mr. Boaz and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Martin, Miss Mabel Hiatt, in a gown of blue velvet, who had at her table Col. and Mrs. Consuelo A. Seaone; Helen Dewey Hoffman, Miss Sara Abbott, Miss Ellen Acree, Dr. Edith Allen, wearing a gown of red velvet with brooch and necklace of garnets; Miss Alice Bachelier, Miss Jessica H. Barr, Miss Clara Beetle, Miss Fanny Boyle, Miss Erma Brown, Dr. Henrietta Burton.

Also Miss Lina W. Carnahan, Miss Emily Clark, Miss Frances Colbert, Miss Esther Colvin, Miss Emma Crans, Miss Florence Currie, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Delehanty, Miss Lena Evans, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Genung, Mrs. Goodwin Graham, Miss Anne Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Heitz, Mrs. Alton Hodgkins, Mrs. James Irwin, Miss Julia McCord, librarian of the club; Miss Louise Newell, Miss Edna Offutt, Miss Netta C. Peterson, Miss Ruth Pierce, Miss Jacqueline Pringle, Miss Myrl Rhine, Miss Elfriede Sander, Miss Nannie Sanders, Mrs. Coralie Schubert, Miss Bertha Sellards, Miss Laura Silsby, Mrs. E. E. Mrs. Tiller reviewed Dr. Lin Yutang's book on China, "My Country and My People," and Mrs. Mary Carter Roberts discussed the biography of Mme. Curie.

The elder is Virginia Alice, aged three years and the younger, Ruth Spaulding, who was born on Valentine's Day last year. Aim in Peace for Security in War, D. A. R. Told by General A. L. Cox at Defense Program

'Safe Way' Is Outlined by the Reserve Unit's Commander.

Armament, created and maintained in time of peace, constitutes the best assurance against war which has been devised and, if war should come, affords the only means of safeguarding the Nation, Gen. Albert L. Cox, senior brigade commander of the reserve units, last night told the members of the Daughters of the American Revolution. He spoke at the annual national defense program, sponsored by Maj. L'Enfant Chapter at the Washington Club. There were 250 leaders in patriotic education activities present.

Gen. Cox, who was captain of the Third North Carolina Infantry on the Mexican border and commanded the 113th Field Artillery overseas during the World War, discussed "Safe Ways to Peace."

"There is a safe way to peace," he said. "It is the difference between a way to peace and a safe way to peace that I desire to bring to your attention. A way to peace can be obtained as easily by a defenseless nation as by a strong nation. A way to peace may be gained by a conquered nation whose citizens are subservient to a stronger foe.

"Our way must be to follow the safe way to peace, that way which insures to the citizens of our land the freedom, the independence, to which they have grown accustomed, the prosperity, the idealism, which for more than a century have been theirs. As a nation, it is our duty to avoid war as long as war can be avoided, but likewise is the duty of our nation to prepare for the security of its citizens.

"It behooves us as American citizens to preserve our nation and, with that end in view, to maintain its armament at as high a state of efficiency as its safety demands and as its resources and other conditions permit.

"Our country is rich, resourceful, populous, progressive and courageous. It insists upon respect for its rights, and likewise gives full recognition to rights of others. It stands for peace, honesty, fairness, and friendship in its intercourse with foreign nations.

"If we are industrious, economical, absolutely fair in our treatment of each other, strictly loyal to our Government, we, the people, may expect to be prosperous and to remain secure in the enjoyment of all those benefits which this privileged land affords.

"But as long as humanity is more or less governed by motives not in accord with the spirit of Christianity, our country may be involved in war by those who believe they are more powerful.

"Every nation that has what is valuable is obligated to be prepared to defend itself against attack or unjust effort to seize and appropriate," declared Gen. Cox. "Even though a man be not inclined to guard his own interests, common decency requires him to furnish reasonable oversight and care to others who are weak and helpless. As a rule, they who preach by word or deed 'Peace at any price,' are not possessed of anything worth having, and are oblivious to the interests of others, including their own dependents."

Preceding Gen. Cox's address, there was a program of music and dancing by Thelma Hardy, soprano, and Eileen Eiden, of the Washington Opera Guild.

Mrs. Edward G. Wright, regent of the chapter, presided, and Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, State regent, and other State officers were in the receiving line.

Officers assisting Mrs. Wright were Mrs. Edwin S. Bettelheim jr., vice regent; Miss Margaret J. Fraser, chaplain; Miss Caroline Isabel Babb, recording secretary; Mrs. Bessie Kennedy, corresponding secretary; Miss Helen Bliss, treasurer; Mrs. Joseph D. Reich, registrar, and Miss Margaret Bloomfield, historian.

Easy Crepe Suzettes Win Post Contest

By Jean Green.

AMERICANS who insist on an elaborate sauce for crepes suzettes are really not following the Continental method of serving them, according to Mrs. Ruth M. Dean, 224 North Jackson street northwest, whose recipe entered in last week's contest won the first award of $3. Her recipe comes from the famous old French Province of Bretagne.

This contest, which included only recipes of foreign origin, was a most popular one with readers. Almost every European country was represented, as well as Java, China, Japan, Mexico, Cuba, Brazil and South Africa. Winning selections were made with difficulty. The unusual and practical qualities of the recipes were major considerations in making final decisions.

CREPES SUZETTES.

5 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons sugar
Pinch of salt
1 cup milk
4 eggs

Put all of the dry ingredients in a bowl and mix well. Add the milk gradually and stir to prevent lumps from forming. Add one egg at a time, (break and beat slightly with a fork before each addition). Continue until all four eggs have been used. If the batter seems too thick, add a little milk.

A heavy skillet is best for the cookery. Use the same amount of shortening as for regular pancakes. Heat until it is sizzling hot. This will prevent the fat from being absorbed. Measure out the batter into the skillet until a thin pancake is formed. This must be done quickly. It may be necessary to turn the skillet from side to side to accomplish this. The amount of batter necessary will depend on the size of the skillet. Mrs. Dean finds that a demitasse coffee cup measures a sufficient quantity in her skillet.

When the cakes have been turned over, take the turner and press them down firmly until you hear a squeaky sound. When golden brown, catch the side of the cake with the turner and roll away from you until all is rolled, then lift it out and onto a warm platter. Sprinkle with powdered sugar to sweeten, or serve with jelly or marmalade. For dessert, the suzettes may be spread with jelly before rolling and then after being rolled, sprinkled with rum and burned.

Beef a la Stroganoff.

1½ pounds of round steak
2 ounces of butter
1 can of mushrooms
1 tablespoon of flour
½ pint of sour cream

Have the round steak cut in strips ¼ inch thick, 1 inch long and ½ inch wide. Brown the strips in butter. Turn them slowly over and over and cook for 20 minutes. Season with salt and pepper. Add 1 can of mushrooms, drained and cut in small pieces.

Brown mushrooms with steak for about ten minutes, slowly. Put in the top of a double boiler. Leave the gravy in the skillet. Add to the gravy more butter, a tablespoon of flour and blend well. Add ½ pint of sour cream. Cook only until well heated. If this is too thick then thin with some of the mushroom juice.

A Hungarian pastry wins the third award. This was submitted by Mrs. R. H. Cochran, 809 Forty-sixth street northwest. Mrs. Cochran writes that the dish is simple to make and delicious with wine.

Cserege.

(Hungarian Pastry.)

2 cups of flour
2 egg yolks
Pinch of salt
2 tablespoons of sugar

Equal parts of brandy and water.

Sift flour, add sugar and salt. Add beaten egg yolks and enough brandy and water to make a pastry the consistency of pie crust. Roll out very thin and cut in strips 1½ by 4 inches. Make a slit in the center lengthwise about 1 inch. Take a corner and pull through the slit. Fry in deep fat until a delicate brown and sprinkle with powdered sugar.

The fourth award was given Sylvia Klein, the Procurement Division, United States Treasury, for her recipe for Persian Chicken.

Persian Chicken.

Truss and boil a tender chicken in 2 quarts of water, adding a chopped onion, a bay leaf, 6 whole peppercorns, a level teaspoon of salt, a stick of cinnamon and a bunch of sweet herbs.

When the meat is tender, remove the big bones, and cut the meat into pieces. Strain the broth, and add to it a cup of well-washed rice. Cover and boil for 12 minutes. Add 1 cup of seeded raisins, a lump of butter and the chicken.

Cover and cook gently until the rice has taken up all the broth. Watch carefully to prevent burning.

Serve on a hot dish with a few blanched almonds sprinkled over the rice. The Persians use a little rose water sprinkled over the rice as well.

Fifth prize is for a hot casserole dish from Chile. This recipe was sent in by Elizabeth Aldrich, 1642 Jonquil street northwest. She writes that in South America, the native cooks grate the corn from the cob. This is a half day's job. Canned shoe peg corn which has been run through the meat grinder gives the same results.

Pastel de Choclos.

(Corn pie).

3 pounds of ground beef
3 medium onions, chopped and browned in butter
1 teaspoon of sugar
½ teaspoon of salt
1 cup of water
1 tablespoon of flour mixed with water to form a paste
1 can of ripe olives
1 pinch of thyme

Mix above ingredients, except the olives, and put in the bottom of the casserole. Add olives as a layer on top of the meat. Then mix the following crust to top it off:

Crust.

3 cans of yellow Bantam shoe peg corn put through the meat grinder
1 onion chopped and browned in butter
1 tablespoon of sugar
½ teaspoon of salt
1 tablespoon of flour mixed with water to a paste.

Mix these ingredients in the frying pan and let simmer a few minutes. Spread over the top of the meat in the casserole to form a crust. Bake in a moderate oven for one hour. This amount serves eight persons.

Dish From Old French Province

Mrs. Ruth M. E. Dean, 224 North Jackson street, Arlington, Va., demonstrates that no special equipment is needed in preparing her recipe for crepes susette. This French dish won the first prize in last week's contest for favorite foreign dishes. Powdered sugar is dusted over them before serving.

Recipe Contest

Citrous fruits provide the theme for the new Post recipe contest. Recipes using the orange, grapefruit and lemon are not only appetizing, but rich in the vitamins needed at this time of year. They can be used in a variety of ways, not only as the base for fruit cocktail and fruit salads, but as a flavoring for desserts.

If you have a recipe for citrous fruits that you think is healthful and delicious, enter in this week's contest. Five cash prizes are being awarded. The first is $3, the second $2, and there are three cash prizes of $1 each. Mail your recipes to Miss Jean Green, The Post Food Editor, before January 15.

Versatile Kraut Can Be Utilized At All 3 Meals

Sauerkraut rates as one of the most versatile products of the vegetable kingdom, in addition to enjoying a high health rating.

So many tasty recipes have been evolved over the centuries sauerkraut has been known to the civilized world that the housewife could prepare a new one every day in the year without exhausting the available list.

Such is its versatility that kraut lends itself to use at breakfast, lunch, dinner and late supper. Curiously enough, it also is utilized in diets for building up the weight and for reducing purposes. A good many dietitians prescribe kraut and kraut juice for both because they possess health-building and health-maintaining properties in either adding to the weight or in helping maintain vigor with a reduced diet.

Kraut-Dol-a-Mah
(Main Dinner Dish.)

Take a 3-pound round steak, cut 1 inch thick, sprinkle salt and pepper over it, cover with thin slices of bacon, place as much kraut on this as possible and roll up and fasten with skewers. Put in a covered baking pan with a pint of water and bake one hour in a moderate oven. Garnish with parsley and slices of lemon.

Baked Sauerkraut and Pork Chops.
(Main Dish.)

Place sauerkraut in the bottom of a baking dish. Add a layer of raw potatoes sliced very thin; season. Cover with pork chops and season these. Cover baking dish and bake for about 45 minutes, or until potatoes and meat are cooked. Uncover and brown pork chops.

Kraut Salad.
(With Dinner.)

A quick salad can be made entirely of sauerkraut and an equal amount of vegetable mixture. The latter may contain diced carrots (cooked or raw), canned or shelled peas, string beans, onion, minced peppers and diced, sweet pickles. Mix with a boiled salad dressing. The ingredients may be varied according to family.

Hollace Shaw Likes Cooking on a Grill

Hollace Shaw, coloratura soprano, likes to entertain intimate friends at dinner in her hotel apartment, concocting deft meals with an electric grill. Her favorite menu consists of broiled lamb chops, a green vegetable and a salad she originated herself—her own version of the ever-popular fruit salad.

It is made of equal parts of peeled and sliced orange and fresh grapefruit, plus a half cup of chopped celery and a ripe avocado pear cut into thin slices. Top with mayonnaise thinned with fruit juice, a bit sour, to bring out the flavor of the avocado.

Soup Spoon Use Important in Table Manners

Bouillon Can Be Sipped From Cup; Mannerisms in Poor Taste.

By Margaret Wallace

THE USE of the soup spoon has an important place in table etiquette. The person who has good table manners will of course move the spoon toward the top of the plate and drink the soup from the side of the spoon. The spoon should be placed in the plate underneath the bowl when the soup is finished.

While it is not proper to drink soup from a cup, it is proper to sip bouillon in this manner. It also is proper to use a spoon when drinking bouillon.

Mannerisms Poor Taste.

It hardly seems necessary to remind anyone not to make a noise while drinking. Mannerisms also are in very poor taste. One of the most common errors is the uncomfortable and affected way some persons curve their fingers when they take up their soup spoons.

It is proper to eat the particles of vegetables, meat and rice in the soup. It never is proper to break up bread or crackers in soup. If oyster crackers are served with oyster soup, it is proper to put a few in at a time, but they must not be broken up.

Some Use Tureen.

At most dinner tables the soup is served from the kitchen after the guests have been seated. Some, especially the members of our Southern colony, like to serve soup at the table from a tureen, presided over by the host or hostess. There is an elegance and leisure to this, and it has the advantage of keeping the soup hotter. But the same type of social skill required to preside at a tea table is needed to make serving soup from a tureen a graceful act. A ladle large enough to hold a third of the individual portions of soup is indispensable. Of course, the person serving the soup from the tureen remains in his seat.

If there is no servant, the person serving the soup should pass the filled plate to the one nearest to him to be passed farther away by the others until all are served. The server is served last.

Mention Given Runners-Up in Recipe Contest

3 Slovakian, Austrian and Spanish Dishes Are Listed for Their Excellence.

THREE recipes were selected for honorable mention from the many entered in last week's Favorite Recipe Contest. The first is holupki, a dish that has justly been called the Slovak national dish, according to its sender. The second is a Spanish dish called ropa vieja or, in English, "old clothes." The third is a recipe for Austrian dumplings that comes from the Tyrolean districts.

Holupki.

(Submitted by Marie Juback, 1836 Sixteenth street northwest.)

1 head of cabbage
2 cups of cooked rice
1 egg
Pepper
Salt
Red paprika

Mix the ground meat, rice and egg. Season well. Place the head of cabbage in scalding water to loosen the leaves. Fill the cabbage leaves with the above mixture by a process of rolling in one direction and then tucking edges to hold mixture securely in each cabbage leaf. The number of holupki that can be made from this recipe depends on the size of the leaves.

Shred the remaining cabbage, adding more, if necessary, to constitute about 4 cups and mix with 2 cups of canned or fresh tomatoes. Place this mixture into a deep cooking utensil as a base for the holupki. Season with salt and pepper. Sprinkle generously with Red paprika. Cover securely and cook for about one hour. Onion or garlic fried in butter can be used as additional seasoning for the filling, if desired.

Ropa Vieja.

(Submitted by Mrs. C. M. Young, 2114 Key boulevard, Colonial Village, Va.)

Fry one green pepper, one large onion and a mashed nib of garlic in ½ cup olive oil. Cook slowly for 5 minutes or until the onion is soft.

Add 2 cups of the meat stock. Add the shredded meat. Let simmer for 15 minutes and then add 2 tablespoons of vinegar. Serve on slices of toasted bread. This serves six persons. Either rice or egg plant is an excellent accompaniment for this dish.

Tiroler Knoedel.

½ loaf of bread or 6 rolls (24 hours old)
½ cup of milk
1 small onion
A little parsley
2 eggs
1 cup of flour
½ cup of melted lard or butter
¼ teaspoon of salt

Cut the bread in small cubes and put in a mixing bowl. Chop onions and parsley. Fry in lard and pour boiling hot over the bread. Stir. Add salt and cold milk. Stir and let stand for about 1 hour, stirring once or twice. After that time stir in the slightly beaten eggs and the flour. Let stand for another half hour.

Prepare a kettle with boiling salted water. Dip your hands in the cold water and form into balls the size of medium apples. Drop the dumplings in the boiling water. Boil gently for 10 minutes. Cover first for 2 or 3 minutes, then take off the cover. You may improve this dish by adding cubes of fried bacon or ham.

Lipstick Proof Tea Menu Served by Mrs. Sol Bloom.

AN AFTERNOON tea menu designed not to mar feminine makeup was served by Mrs. Sol Bloom, wife of Representative Bloom, and her daughter, Vera, at the Blooms' first at-home of the season, held Tuesday afternoon. The mushroom patties and individual shortcakes which caused such furor of interest among the feminine guests were made small enough to be eaten without damage to lipsticks.

Mrs. Bloom disclaimed any credit for special culinary secrets in the matter. "Any recipe can be used," she said. "The whole thing is to make the patties and pastries small enough so they can be popped into the mouth like candy and consumed all in one bite." Mrs. Bloom warned that it takes "infinite patience" to make them. Here is her tea menu:

Menu.

Mushroom patties
Assorted sandwiches
Watercress
Cream cheese with caviar
Marmalade
Boston brown bread with sweet butter filling
Assorted desserts in miniature:
Lemon meringue pies
Fresh strawberry shortcakes
Chocolate cream puffs

The mushroom patties were delectable tidbits of flavor. They were made just like the large ones except for size. These patties were the size of quarters. Chopped fresh mushrooms with sauce made the filling. The strawberry shortcakes were of puff paste and as small as possible. Sweetened whipped cream was inserted inside the pastry with a pastry tube and a whole fresh strawberry used for a garnish. Pastry the size of a nickel was filled with eclair filling and iced with chocolate icing. The lemon pies were petite versions of regular pies with delicately browned meringue.

Tea was served from a small round tea table by Mrs. Bloom. The pastries and sandwiches were served in different parts of the room from muffin stands, a most convenient and attractive service.

Tell Fortunes at Parties

NO LONELY gaps in your social life if fortune-telling is in your bag of tricks. Anywhere and everywhere are chances to show your skill.

You and your date spend an evening by the fire? Play the mysterious, fascinating soothsayer. A fan-like ember flying your way whispers of a flirtation. A heart-shaped spark bursting near your beau foretells a romance.

A lively party—and suddenly it sags? Whip out a deck of cards and say "Who'd like his fortune told?" Everybody will love it. And when you interpret the cards this old French way you have the crowd all ears.

Suppose the ace of hearts turns up in Tim's fortune. The ace is a travel card—and the hearts are the romance suit. Certainly a honeymoon is near for Tim. Then you may turn up the two of diamonds. The diamond is the money suit and the two spot means a gift.

The three-spot hints a letter. As it's a spade, the trouble suit, there's a headache coming for Tim. Maybe a bill? But if he draws the nine of hearts, he needn't worry. His pet wish comes true.

Or perhaps you have friends for tea. Fun and easy to read the leaves. Ask Jane to drink her cup dry, turn it around three times and turn the cup upside down. If the leaves are near the rim, the fates will be kind to her. Leaves at the bottom are not so cheery. If there is a triangle of leaves with apex pointing up—good luck. Little dots, money.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, Let Me Tell Your Fortune, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West 19th street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

'Au Gratin' Doesn't Mean 'With Cheese'

Other Misconceptions of Food Phrases.

Contrary to public opinion "au gratin" does not mean "with cheese!" but rather, ice, glazed or frozen. Neither does "glace" mean candied, but rather, ice glazed or frozen. Dishes which appear on menus marked "a la provencale" are not, as is said, "out of the provences" or "country style," but are made with oil or garlic or both.

That "au gratin" business got started because so many scalloped or dishes "gratinee" are made with cheese, the grated part was originally crumbs.

"Sea Pie" (often mentioned in old stories) is not made of fish at all, but of cooked sliced meat and vegetables. If you order something "Crecy" from a menu, you'll find it's carrot-y—and like it. Grille (from which we get grilled) means "toasted" so call them "marshmallows grille" if it makes you feel high-toned! "Bisque," which we apply to practically every type of cream soup, correctly means only soup made with shell fish. Or just to confuse you, it may be a rich frozen dessert.

Here's a dinner-time piece of show-off: "Demi-tasse" does mean "half cup" alright, but the French from whom we took it never use the word for after-dinner black coffe; they say "cafe noir."

"A la Normandie" doesn't mean it came from Normandy, but calls to mind the old song about apple blossom time because such a dish should contain apples (but may also contain shrimps).

The modernists are bent on still further charming confusion. "Scallops" are not little fish when they're made with bananas, but delicious little morsels of banana crumbed and fried. Try them.

Vitamins A, D Held Important In Winter Diet

Particularly Needed Where Person Is Working Indoors.

By Nancy Ellis.

IF YOU are working indoors, the chances are you should check on your diet to be sure you are obtaining a sufficient quantity of Vitamins A and D. These vitamins are apt to be lacking in the winter time, according to a bulletin of the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.

Vitamin D is formed by the skin when exposed to the ultraviolet rays from the sun. In the winter the number of hours of sunlight is shortened and the quantity of ultraviolet rays lessened. In the case of Vitamin A, winter diets are apt to be lacking in fresh green and yellow vegetables, the bulletin points out. In the summer, home-grown fresh vegetables and fruits are abundant and cheap.

Vitamin D is necessary in the proper building of teeth and bones. For these the diet also must provide a sufficient amount of phosphorus and calcium. Vitamin D enables the body to utilize these minerals.

Develops Rickets.

A severe lack of Vitamin D will cause rickets in a child or stunt his growth. Rickets is a disease that occurs most often during his first two years, but the results may last through life. In rickets, bones become deformed, muscles are weak and flabby. Bow legs and the "pigeon breasts" are two of the most common results.

To safeguard against these deficiencies, the child specialists advise cod liver oil as a source of Vitamin D the year round for children under 2 years. In cities where the air is filled with smoke or where children play in the shadow of tall buildings or in narrow alleys, a cod liver oil prescription is needed throughout the year. The ulutraviolet rays of the sun cannot penetrate smoke-filled air or ordinary window glass.

Adults seldom have a diet deficient in Vitamin D. They probably get a sufficient quantity under normal conditions from exposure to the sun and from foods such as egg yolks, salmon, sardines and butter.

Vitamin A is necessary for normal growth. However, it is needed at all ages of life to keep eyes, the linings of the ears, nose, throat, kidneys in normal condition. The amount of Vitamin A an adult needs depends upon his weight. As the amount of food he needs also depends upon his weight, he may be reasonably sure of obtaining enough Vitamin A if he eats a well balanced diet.

Reserve Supply.

Under certain conditions, special emphasis should be placed on seeing that quantities of A in excess are consumed. An expectant and nursing mother needs generous amounts of Vitamin A. Those recovering from disease also need more to build up a reserve supply normally present in the liver. Also persons trying to reduce body weight or those who have a limited amount of money to spend for foods should be sure to include foods rich in A.

Egg yolk, cream, butter, cheese, liver and fish oils are excellent sources. Other excellent sources are the green vegetables, such as spinach, lettuce and broccoli. Carrots, sweet potatoes, yellow squash, red tomatoes and green peppers have good amounts. Apricots, prunes and yellow peaches are also excellent sources, even though dried.

Grapefruit Peel Useful for Candy

A candy to delight the woman who is watching her waistline is prepared by cooking thin strips of grapefruit peel in a sirup made of pineapple juice and sugar. The result is a delicious candy with a gumdrop consistency and the true pineapple flavor. To add color to the peel the sirup may be tinted with vegetable coloring, and for variety the peel may be cut in fancy shapes before cooking.

Candied Grapefruit Peel.

Wash grapefruit skins, remove all membrane, leaving the thick white and yellow rind, and cut into strips about 3 inches long and ⅜ of an inch wide. Place rind in a kettle and cover with cold water. Bring water to a boil and boil for 15 minutes. Drain and repeat process twice. Rinse peel with cold water and drain thoroughly. Make a sirup, using one cup pineapple juice to one cup of sugar. Bring sirup to a boil and boil for ten minutes before adding peel. Sirup should just cover the peel. Bring sirup to a good boil and then turn heat low so sirup will simmer gently. Cook until skins become glazed and have absorbed all the sirup. Lay candied peel on a tray covered with waxed paper to dry (overnight). Then roll each strip in granulated sugar. One cup of sugar and one cup of juice will make enough sirup to cover the peel from two grapefruit of medium size (about 2 cups of fruit peel).

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"I should like to tell you how I have recently worked out ideas in my attic space. At the dormer windows, I have hung cellophane curtains (natural with flowers of blue, red and yellow). These admit all the light and are especially charming when the sun shines through. My walls here are sunshiny yellow and the floors are Spanish blue. I have three scatter-size rag rugs (6x9) and four round braided rugs. The bed has a chenille spread of Spanish blue and on it are several pillows of smoky pink and a lacy cushion. I have assembled my old walnut furniture here—sofa, rocker, occasional chairs, two tables, washstand, mirrors and footstools. For real comfort, I have a 9x12 Anglo-Persian rug, a davenport in eggshell with cushions seamed with brown moss braid. On the davenport are two blue pillows, and the stairs have their treads painted blue with white rails. The newell post at the head of the stairs is flat and on it is fastened an ivory basket which always holds a flowering plant. I delight in the liberties you can take in decorating an attic space! You can break so many rules!"

We agree, in fact, we doubly appreciated this letter because we've just been involved with painter and paper hanger in our own attic the last week. Here's what we've been doing. One little attic room with sloping ceiling we've had papered in the gayest paper ever—black ground, believe it or not, with brilliant pink ribbons fluttering all over it and lots of pink flowers. The woodwork and furniture have been painted in pale pink and we've cut motifs out of the paper and pasted them on bed and dresser in medallions. The curtains are a gossamer lace net and so is the spread, over pale pink sateen. Then repeating the green leaves in the paper, we've added a green rag rug and a green chintz chair.

PeaceHopeless, Dodd Declares En Route Home

By the United Press.

Aboard S. S. Washington, by Wireless to New York, Jan. 6.—William E. Dodd, returning home after resigning his post as American Ambassador to Berlin, tonight bitterly condemned Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's Nazi regime for its religious persecutions and race hatreds.

The former university professor of history, en route to Washington to report to the State Department, said he resigned in despair after four and a half years of diplomatic service because he was unable to accomplish any great good in the face of Nazi policies.

"In a vast region where religious freedoms are denied and where intellectual initiative and discovery is not allowed, where race hatreds are cultivated daily, what can a representative of the United States do?" he asked.

Dodd said leaders of big business and industry have repeatedly defeated world peace efforts by their greed.

The diplomat, who frequently clashed with the Nazi regime, described how he went to Europe as ambassador, imbued with the hope of serving his country and the cause of peace.

"But how much one could do is an open question," he added. "The present day world learned nothing from the great war.

Assails Business Groups.

"The logical outcome of the present vast war preparations is another war and what would another war leave of modern civilization?

"The great business and industrial groups failed to recognize the necessity of international co-operation after 1920. Some of their chiefs defeated world peace efforts at Geneva more than once because they thought the sale of arms and war materials more important than world peace.

"Other groups insisted on trade barriers which made debt payments impossible.

"With the war preparations and the raising of trade barriers beyond anything ever known in modern history another method of government has been adopted from Rome to Tokyo.

"Religious and intellectual freedom has been abolished over that area. Jews have been expelled and imprisoned. No doubt the Hebrews have profiteered at times, but what other race has been free from such members."

Dodd's attack on "great business and industrial groups" recalled his statement in Berlin last May that an "American billionaire" sought to be dictator of the United States. The charge was contained in a letter he wrote to Senator Robert J. Bulkley (Democrat), of Ohio.

Later he said influential men in the United States had told him of "certain great millionaires" who favored a dictatorship.

Last fall, while visiting the United States, Dodd bitterly opposed the sending of a United States diplomatic agent to the Nazi Party Congress at Nuremberg, Germany. The State Department overruled his objections, however, and Prentiss B. Gilbert, charge d'affaires of the Berlin Embassy attended.

"Was it the duty of representatives of democratic countries to attend conferences at which democracy was ridiculed and attacked. I cannot think so.

TO AID AND PROTECT INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT IN THE SOUTHEAST

WITH MALICE TOWARD NONE

THE alarmed attitude of other sections of the country toward the purposes of the Southeastern Governors' Conference, as reported by the PRESS, is indeed surprising. The Southeast feels that it has a natural right to call to the attention of American Industry the many advantages this section offers. Forcefully and truthfully — with malice toward none — the natural advantages offered by the Southeast will be placed before the Nation in this and subsequent advertisements. The statements made are simple truths and will stand four square in the light of any inquiry which seeks unbiased facts. The Southeast wants no one to seek locations in her midst expecting cheap and low paid labor or long hours of work. Sweat shop operators are, and will be unwelcome. We have stated that the year 'round moderate climate of this section makes possible LOWER LIVING COSTS for Better Standards of living; less for rent, less for fuel and less for food and clothing for a family. The Southeast knows no long months of unrelenting cold, heavy snow, sleet and ice. This insures lower capital investments, lower construction costs, lower productions costs. Analyze the above economies, and you will readily understand why workers in this section enjoy BETTER STANDARDS OF LIVING AT LOWER LIVING COSTS.

Southeastern Governors Conference

WE, THE GOVERNORS . . .

WITH a view to aiding industrial expansion of our section and the stabilization of employment, we, the Governors of the Southeastern States, set forth the following objectives: 1. Equitable freight-rates as affect the Southeast. 2. Uniform taxation policies. 3. Friendly labor attitude between employer and employee. 4. Cooperation with Federal Government on proper major policies affecting industrial development.

It will be our aim by working together on these objectives to maintain conditions favorable to sound industrial development so that the Southeast will reap the full benefits of the ever-increasing trend toward Industrial Decentralization and gain a proper balance between agriculture and industry.

Iceless Washington Boasts Figure Skating Star and Perhaps a Future Sonja Henie

By Walter Haight.

I don't know whether it was a nose for news, the old Haight detective instinct or just plain luck, but, somehow, the fact that two pairs of ice skates had been among a burglar's loot seemed to have story possibilities. Perhaps I could locate an Olympic skating champion, a world record holder or, perhaps, another Sonja Henie.

No, he wasn't an Olympic champion, he wasn't a world record holder nor a male Sonja Heinie. "But my little daughter is something of a skater," said Mr. Snell.

Little did I realize at the moment that Mr. Snell's one sentence was going to mean an education in ice skating to a Post photographer and me a few hours later.

En route to Takoma Park, I determined that the photographer was as skate ignorant as myself. We both agreed that as far as we were concerned, ice was something to put in high balls and around beer. The only skating Haight that I could call to mind was Grandpa Haight, who, I'm told, cut figure eights to Alexandria and back when the Potomac froze over in the 90s.

Mr. and Mrs. Snell greeted us and ushered us into a cozy living room. On the davenport, beside a friendly open fire, sat Dorothy Jean Snell, up to her neck in homework. At her feet lay a huge English spaniel, the largest dog I seen since Charles Town closed.

* * * *

We were not long in determining that we were visiting "Skateville." The Snells fairly reflected the sports. Skating magazines everywhere. Skating pictures on the wall. A pair of skates in the corner. But the Snells have every right to be skate conscious.

Dorothy, 15, Mr. Snell's "little daughter who is something of a skater," really is one of the Midle West's best skaters and was second in the women's novice singles of the national championship last year at Chicago. Dorothy now is a student at Montgomery-Blair High School. The family moved East from St. Paul, Minn., because of Mr. Snell's work with the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

I advanced the theory that Dorothy would have to give up skating if she continued to live here.

"Oh, no," said Mrs. Snell, "I take Dorothy to the Baltimore rinks at least four times a week. I do wish Washington had someone with foresight enough to build an ice rink. However, as long as Dorothy cares for skating and as long as the car runs, I'll see that she skates. Now she is preparing for the national championships. Fortunately, they will be near—at Philadelphia. Dorothy was on the ice every day during the Christmas holidays and I hope to have her practicing daily for the final week before the nationals."

* * * *

The fire was getting low. Mr. Snell turned to the dog and said, "Mike, go down and get a log for the fire."

Mike came into the room and dragged a log up to the hearth. I looked at the photographer. He looked at me. We were both cold sober.

There followed a discussion of skating in general. We learned that one must go back to dim ages for the origin of the sport. The primitive Norsemen glided from fjord to fjord on the ribs of kine, reindeer or horses tied to whatever it was they used for shoes.

In 1180 an Englishman wrote about young men "playing on the yce, striding as wide as they may doe, sliding swiftly." But, the Snells told me, the Dutch were the first to go into skating in a big way. Bone skates were used at first, but they finally went in for wrought iron ones. History, I was told, records a battle won by the Dutch, on skates, over an army of slipping, sliding Spaniards.

* * * *

"How did Dorothy start skating? Well, she was 7 when her grandfather made her a pair of skates," said Mr. Snell. "We lived near a rink and one evening she failed to come home on time for dinner. I went to the rink and found her skating rings around a group of boys and girls much older than herself. I took her home and that night we decided that Dorothy would have to have figure skates."

Obtaining skates for Dorothy was not a problem. J. E. Strouss of St. Paul, her grandfather, was, and still is, one of the world's best-known skatemakers. He has a jealously guarded secret process for hardening skate steel and, incidentally, now has among his customers famous Sonja Henie and virtually every United States skating star.

"Dorothy's grandfather was enthusiastic about making Dorothy a pair of figure skates," said Mr. Snell. "I never progressed beyond the 'just skating' stage in the sport to my father's disappointment. Mrs. Snell skated a little."

* * * *

It was not long until Dorothy's skating reached exhibition proportions. She appeared in many shows, but her most cherished skating memories are of the several times she appeared on the ice with Sonja Henie when the latter was Olympic champion.

He put it on the floor before the photographer and me. We might have been a couple of hungry newspapermen, but we didn't look underfed. Mr. Snell cleared up the mystery by telling us that Mike could do everything but open a can, and he gave all strangers a chance to perform that service for him.

* * * *

"Dorothy has had three skating teachers, and two of them—Howard Nicholson and Robin Lee's father—were teachers of Sonja Henie," Mrs. Snell said. "She is now taking from Orrin Mickhus, a Minnesota boy who is instructing at the Baltimore rink."

* * * *

Dorothy showed us the only pair of skates that the burglar missed. The shoes cost $25 a pair. The runners are somewhat like the kind we used to clamp on at the heel and toe. These, however, have a saw effect on the front for running and toe stands and a point, scarcely larger than that of a pin, on which skaters dot those pivots.

Dorothy will have new skates and shoes for the national championships.

"Sorry that you have to leave so early," said Mrs. Snell, as she brought us our coats.

* * * *

Just before Mrs. Snell closed the door, the photographer, who had said hardly a word during our visit, asked, "Say, lady, can that dog carry out the ashes, too?"

This Morning..

With Shirley Povich

No dullard is Mr. Ford Fick, president of the National League. Advised recently that a movement was afoot (movements somehow are timid about horses) to install Mr. Larry McPhail as manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, Mr. Frick's ears pricked. With great haste he threw the weight of his office behind the McPhail-to-Brooklyn idea and it is nearing fruit.

POVICH.

On the theory that any guy who could align himself with a plot to kidnap the Kaiser, and barely miss on what would have been the most sensational snatch in history, would not be feazed by the Brooklyn baseball situation, Frick likes the red-headed McPhail for the job. Brooklyn needs the McPhail touch.

The daffiness of the Dodgers would not necessarily upset Mr. McPhail, Frick doubtless reasons. McPhail received much training along those lines in the winter of 1919 when, as Capt. Lawrence McPhail, of the United States Army of Occupation in Germany, he set forth with four other Tennesseans on the bizarre excursion into Holland to snatch Kaiser Wilhelm and bring him to justice.

The only person McPhail succeeded in bringing to justice was himself. He was summoned to court-martial before Gen. Pershing in France for violating military regulations and entering Holland with bogus passports. But he had the satisfaction of making a good try for the Kaiser, gaining admittance to the retired sovereign's home at Doorn before faithful watchdogs balked the plot.

The Dodgers, who have been committing Brooklyn baseball in the nether-regions of the National League for a dozen years now, might conceivably reform under McPhail. Any guy who could come within 20 feet of kidnaping the Kaiser ought to find it comparatively easy to put the snatch on a couple of pitchers with something on the ball and rope an outfielder or two who wasn't rsiking brain concussion whenever he set out after a fly ball.

At last reports, McPhail was insisting on complete charge of the Dodgers before he would take the job. Thus he knows what he is undertaking. Brooklyn has been the graveyard of managers and general managers for so long that Flatbush folk speak with a hush whenever they pass Ebbetts Field.

* * * *

Flatbush Feud Still Rages.

Matching the native zaniness of what has laughingly been called the Brooklyn baseball team has been the wrangling of the owners of the Brooklyn Club. England's War of the Roses was a mild, backyard squabble compared to the feud that has been raging between the McKeevers and the heirs to the Ebbetts estate over control and policy of the Brooklyn team. The McKeevers and Ebbetses each own 50 per cent of the stock and are about as friendly as the traditional cobra and the mongoose.

Until he died, several years ago, the late Uncle Wilbert Robinson was able to co-ordinate the Ebbetts and McKeever interests and bring some semblance of order out of the chaos, but with the passing of Robbie they were back at each other's throats and have been ever since.

At one time, as recently as last year, the McKeevers and Ebbettses had succeeded in entangling the affairs of the Dodgers in such a state that Casey Stengel, who had been fired as manager at the end of the 1936 season and his contract bought up, was drawing more money from the Brooklyn Club for not managing the Dodgers than Burleigh Grimes was being paid for managing the team.

McPhail, of course, is aware of all this and his demand that he be given complete charge of the team is no surprise. McPhail's habit is to do things in the grand manner and he does not like to be hamstrung.

He's something of an operator, McPhail is. He came out of George Washington University with a law degree before the war, enlisted, rose to a captaincy and after being mustered out, decided he was no lawyer. He turned promoter and dashed post haste to Cincinnati four years ago when he learned that the Cincinnati Reds' stock had been dumped back into the laps of the banks by Sidney Weil who for three years had been taking a financial beating with the team.

* * * *

He Likes That McPhail Touch.

McPhail talked fast and the banks authorized him to find a backer who would take over the Cincinnati Club on a long l ease with the option of buying it. McPhail came up with a fair sort of backer in Millionaire Powell Crosley, of radio fame. Crosley appointed McPhail general manager of the club, gave him a free hand and watched him work.

The first thing that McPhail accomplished with his flair for talk was to convince the ultra-conservative National League chiefs that night baseball would be a success. It was such a success that the Reds played to a home attendance of 450,000 fans in 1935 and as a seventh-place team were one of the big money makers in the National League that season.

Tech Quint, Wilson Open Cage Series

By Jack Munhall.

Western High School tonight exposes to an ambitious pack of challengers the inter-high basketball crown which unexpectedly came into its possession last season.

On the opening night of a two-month scramble for the championship, Western meets Central's team at Tech gym. This game follows the Tech-Wilson contest which officially opens the 1938 series at 7:30 p. m.

It's virtually a new role for Western—this business of defending a basketball championship. Last year's triumph of the Georgetown school was its first in more than ten years and ended a three-year monopoly of Eastern.

Western, in its initial test, will take the court against a Central outfit that to date does not loom as a serious title threat. Not until the series is in full swing and the champions are pitted against Eastern and Roosevelt is Western's title expected to be in jeopardy.

Wilson, Dark Horse.

Chief interest tonight probably will attach to the Tech-Wilson meeting. Wilson, a newcomer to the series last season, is unbeaten in three early games but is an unknown quantity. In facing Tech, however, the Presidents, who failed to win a 1937 series game will play an equally known quantity, for Coach Bruce Kessler has not yet decided on a regular line-up. In previous starts he has alternated three complete fives which, he claims, possess almost equal ability.

Pre-series dope is unusually scarce this season because of the new ruling which restricts to 18 the number of games public schools may book. And since ten interhigh contests are necessarily "musts" on the schedule little opportunity is given them for outside games.

However, on the basis of the few games in which the competing teams have engaged, Western is favored to hold its crown after a close fight with Eastern. Roosevelt seems better equipped to provide an upset should the leaders falter.

Western Defending.

Western, with a sprinkling of veterans, has dropped but one game, that to a formidable alumni team, in an informal affair. Meanwhile it has defeated Baltimore City College among other victims. The success of the West End representatives has been attributed to smooth passing and a well-balanced attack in which all players figure. There are no outstanding stars; rather a squad of well-coached, capable boys whose motto is teamwork.

In contrast is its chief rival, Eastern, which seems to have the best material in the series. Retaining four regulars, All-high Russ Lombardy, Lee Lusby, "Soup" Hancock and Clint Quantrille from last year's crack team, the Lincoln Parkers were further bolstered by the acquisition of Ralph Matera, a transfer from Central.

But offsetting this apparent wealth of material at Eastern are (1) The impending loss in midseason of Clint Quantrille, slated to be graduated in February, (2) A total lack of team play evidenced in early games this season, and, (3) Reports of dissension within the ranks of the players.

Quantrille's absence from the lineup in the second half of the series will be keenly felt for the 6-foot-4 center, has proved invaluable in controlling tapoffs and retrieving stray shots. Also he is the team's most prolific scorer to date.

Mel Shorey Shatters Record At Rock Creek With 64 Card

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Playing with Reds Smith, the duo shot a best ball of 61, with George Diffenbaugh, Indian Spring pro, and Ernie Garlem, public links ace, as paying witnesses.

The round lowered by two strokes Claude Rippy's 66, best previous mark shot over the Rock Creek course, although winter rules and three temporary greens made the score invalid as an official course mark.

It was the third 32 in two days shot by the East Potomac pro. On Wednesday he played East Potomac's G course, par 36, in 32 blows, including four consecutive birdies. It also was his third round under 70 for the week, having garnered a 68 at Rock Creek in a previous round.

Starting on A course, Mel dropped a 3-footer for a birdie on the second hole after laying an approach dead. He played par to the seventh, where he missed a short putt, but regained the stroke with a 10-foot birdie putt on the ninth.

His longest putt of the day followed on the first hole on B, a 20-footer, and he had par in for a 63 as he pitched close to the cup and holed a 4-foot putt on the fifteenth. He went a stroke over on the next, taking three to reach the green, and played the two finishing holes in par.

The Rock Creek course has been a haven of low rounds in the past week. Volney Burnett scored a 31 on A course, starting with five consecutive three's, two pars and three birdies, while playing with Shorey, who was 32-36—68.

Bitsy Grant, B. Riggs Win

By the Associated Press.

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 6.—Bobby Riggs, of Chicago and Bitsy Grant, of Atlanta advanced to the semi-finals in separate brackets of the Miami Biltmore tennis tournament today but the other seeded players were eliminated.

Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif., put out fourth-seeded Arthur Hendrix, of Lakeland, Fla., 6-1, 5-7, 6-1 in the quarter-finals. Marion Reese, of Atlanta spilled Wayne Sabin, of Hollywood, Calif., seeded third, 7-5, 4-6, 6-4 in a delayed second round match.

Reese then dropped a third-round match to George Parks, of Miami, 6-3, 6-1, and Parks bowed in the quarter-finals to Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Ore., 6-3, 6-3.

Grant and Cooke will meet in the semi-final of the lower bracket tomorrow afternoon. The other semi-final, between Riggs and Kovacs, will be held until Saturday with the final Sunday.

Kovacs and Hendrix teamed before their singles duel to finish up a doubles match against Abraham Bassford, of New York and Bernie Frank, of Miami that was halted by darkness yesterday after the first set, which Kovacs and Hendrix won, had gone to 19-17. Bassford and Frank had a 4-1 lead in the second set when play was interrupted and went on to take it today at 6-2 but Kovacs and Hendrix won the third, 7-5.

Challenger Hopes to Get Title Fight

Victory for Coast Boy Would Force Shot at Crown.

By Eddie Brietz,

New York, Jan. 6,—Tomorrow night's 12-round nontitle fight in Madison Square Garden between Freddie Steele, middleweight champion, and Fred Apostoli, of San Francisco, his foremost challenger, may pave the way for an outdoor meeting between the pair next summer with Steele's jealously guarded title on the line.

Even though the championship is not involved and Apostoli would not be recognized if he upsets huge buckets of dope and wins, the fight is shaping up as far and away the most important middleweight clash of the indoor season.

For one thing, the two are old rivals. For another, there is no love lost between the rival managers. And to top off the grudge angle, Steele has been severely criticized for his apparent willingness to give almost every middle a shot at his crown except the former San Francisco bellhop.

Indications tonight were that the champion will go into the ring a 5-to-8 favorite.

It will be the second meeting between the pair. Almost three years ago Steele was credited with a ten-round technical knockout when the referee stopped the fight after Apostoli's eye had been cut. The San Franciscan was on his feet at the time, but he had been floored for a short count in the previous round.

Apostoli, who has agreed to fight at between 160 and 165 pounds, is expected to scale around 161 at noon tomorrow.

Ducey and Lottus, of the hosts, were high-point men, with nine apiece, while Morris and Slaughter led the visitors, each with six points.

Don't Be Surprised if the Veteran Yost Returns to Old Harness

New York, Jan. 6.—Jesse Owens, who showed excellent business judgment in running right off the amateur reservation after the 1936 Olympics, has about as much chance of regaining simon-pure status as he has intention of returning to get a degree at Ohio State . . . No stigma or criticism attaches to what the Buckeye Bullet did after pacing the victorious United States track and field team at Berlin . . . His own coach advised him to seize the chance of "cashing in," which he did, but Jesse's amateur career is behind him now, so far as the A. A. U. is concerned.

Lou Little, who likes his football coaching job at Columbia, but would like it better if he had a few more players, is strictly "mum" on the talk of linking his name with other colleges, including his alma mater, Pennsylvania . . . It's a good bet he will stick to upper Broadway for his football, retain the red and blue motif for neckties only . . . Some grid observers won't be surprised if Fielding H. Yost himself takes over the head coaching for Michigan again this year, despite all the gumshoeing for Harry Kipke's successor . . . It wouldn't be the first time he's moved in from the sidelines to take charge.

Speaking of Rice, won't it be fun in the Southwest Conference with the new, liberalized passing rules in force next season? . . . The "passingest league" should produce some new high scoring records for football . . . Proposals for a new heavyweight class in professional pugilism, to cover competition among fighters scaling between 175 and 190 pounds, leave old-timers like Jack Dempsey very cold—Dempsey, like many other ring greats, never was bothered by giving away poundage . . . He scaled only 183 the day he beat Jess Willard for the heavyweight title, spotting Jess around 60 pounds.

Bill Ackerman.

Late this month, Jack and Paul Townsend will board the diesel cruiser Patsy at Miami and under the able command of Capt. Bill Hatch, for a trip, the first leg of which will be the 150-mile stretch down Hawk Channel to Key West.

ACKERMAN.

Then the 90 miles across to Havana; water under ordinary conditions comparable to that of a millpond, but which on occasion can be as dirty as any along the North Atlantic.

From there, by easy daylight trips and fishing all the while, they will follow around the "Tip" to spend several weeks in search of the great blue marlin off southern Cuba.

A real fishing trip, if we ever ran across one, and one that we would almost give our arm to be a member of the party; but that being impossible our thoughts will often be with them, with every wish for tight lines.

• • • •

George O. Sutton, who, while fishing with Bill Hatch, was the first angler to catch blue marlin at Miami this season, is busy with plans for his new Wheeler cruiser that he is having built especially for the white marlin fishing off the Maryland coast this coming summer.

The interest this exceptional fishing can inspire is something to wonder about. Hardly a year ago he was serving his novitiate at biggame fishing under the tutelage of Paul Townsend. Now he is deep in the charts and the water temperatures of the section between the Virginia and Delaware capes and from the shore to the 1,000-fathom curve, with the idea, deepest in his mind, that a certain spot not unlike a cove in this curve, will prdouce a brand of fishing that will make the long trip well worthwhile.

Most offshore boats are powered with twin engine installations, and his will be no exception. A pair of Chrysler motors will give him a top speed of around 20 miles—ample to make the long run in a seasonable time.

These water temperatures are interesting facts and show just why the great fish leave the Gulf Stream and follow on up, hardly more than 20 miles offshore and much more than that distance inside the stream.

• • • •

Many anglers who for years have followed the sometimes almost frigid waters of the shore would never believe that there is a distinct lane of water, separate from the stream, with temperature readings of over 80 degrees.

There is little doubt that this coming season will see many boats fishing these grounds for the first time, for news of the big catches coming in almost daily weren't appreciated by the great fleets of sports fishermen, cruising the Jersey coast with little or no luck. So it is expected that starting this year, they will fish the Jacks Pot for the four or five weeks before the fishing gets going on the Jersey shore.

• • • •

While the boats new to the Jacks Pot white marlin fishing are enjoying it, George Sutton and the Townsends, who are rebuilding a rumrunner and powering it with three Scripps 200s, will be exploring the drop-off on the edge of the Gulf Stream.

It is almost a foregone conclusion that they will find plenty of action—we hope they will keep Post Notes informed as to their luck.

• • • •

Just three days before Xmas, a netter, John Price, working off Secretary Creek in the Choptank caught several herring. The first in his many years of fishing to be so taken before the month of March.

Many baymen are claiming it a sure sign of a mild winter, but about that we have little knowledge. Perhaps some "Old-Timer" around here could tell us what it means.

It is with deep regret that we learn that Dr. M. D'Arcy Magee has given up any thought of again heading the Washington Chapter of the Izaak Walton League of America as its president.

Fraidy Cat, Favorite, Is Poor Third

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., Jan. 6. Wise Prince, veteran sprinter in the silks of Philadelphia's Felix Spatola, made an impressive winter debut here today when he won the Winter Haven Purse. The son of Wise Counsellor, with splendid Maryland form to recommend him, equaled Clotho's 6-furlong track record of 1:10 flat while beating Mrs. Emil Denemark's Higher Cloud, a recent winner, by a length. Eddie Arcado, who had just won the previous event, made it two in a row astride the Prince.

H. P. Headley's Friday Cat, another that was starting for the first time at the meeting, failed those who made him a heavy favorite at odds of $1.30 on the dollar. The Westerner failed to get off on time, but closed ground to finish a good third, a half-dozen lengths behind. Wise Prince returned $9.80 for $2.

Hirsch Jacobs, as well as Arcaro, scored a double. The Brooklyn pacemaker of American trainers had previously sadded the victorious Mauritius.

High Cloud, after a good start, went right to the front, along with Gene Wagers and Wise Prince. Gene Wagers soon dropped back and left the issue between Higher Cloud and the ultimate winner. Wise Prince came around Higher Cloud in the stretch, assumed command at the sixteenth pole, and was ridden out to the wire while drawing away. Higher Cloud had scant opposition from Fraidy Cat.

With Johnny Longden increasing his lead over rival jockeys at the meeting, High Image, a 6-year-old sprinter, easily rewarded the talent in the curtain raiser. The $5.40 for $2 choice was faultlessly rated, behind the early pace, responded willingly in the stretch and drew clear to win by two lengths. Scottish Mary outlasted Richstrike, which beat most of the pace, for the place award. With a strong wind blowing against him in the short stretch, High Image ran the 6 furlongs in 1:11 4-5.

After a string of failures, Phil Bieber put over his first winner of the meeting when Light Cruiser, paying $16.50 won the second race under a strong ride by Mike Sarno. Ziggy trailed the victor by a half length, with Nemont another half length away in the third hole. Kept close to the early pace of the favored Secret Chatter, which stopped, Light Cruiser closed steadily through the stretch and held Ziggy safe. Nemont faltered after gaining a narrow advantage in the stretch.

Hirsch Jacobs sent the Gallant Fox gelding, Mauritius, against 10 other platers in the third race and his charge easily made the grade to pay $13.10. Charlie Kurtsinger did a perfect job in the saddle and guided his mount to the wire four lengths clear of Al Carlys. Bailiwick finished

Indoor Track Season Looks Promising.

By Jack Cuddy.

New York, Jan. 6 (U.P.).—Ressurrecting the ninth division in boxing:

Edward J. Foster og Providence, R. I., executive secretary of the National Boxing Association, believes that the International Boxing Conference at Rome, starting April 19, will adopt a new weight division in the sport.

* * * *

He expects the conference to approve a division between the light heavyweight 175-pound division and heavies weighing 215 pounds or more. Chances are this division will be called "middle heavyweight" or something like that—if adopted.

* * * *

And it probably will be adopted because those European boxing officials are screwy enough to do anything. At that, I guess they're not much worse than some of the lads who handled or are handling the sport in the United States.

* * * *

You will recall that the National Boxing Association for several years had junior lightweight and junior welterweight divisions. I do not recall that those divisions ever were recognized in New York State. However, when the late William Muldoon was the powerhouse of the New York commission, that body tried to introduce a ninth weight division called the "dreadnaught," for big fellows scaling more than 220 pounds. Muldoon wanted this division to prevent giants like Primo Carnera, Jose Santa, Ray Impellettiere, etc., from fighting chaps weighing scarcely more than the 175-pound limit. That's the same idea back of this new division to be considered at Rome.

* * * *

This idea of preventing the big fellow from fighting the little fellow works out fine up through the classifications from flyweight to heavyweight. But I believe another division injected after the 175-pound limit would be futile and confusing.

* * * *

It would be unfair to match a lightweight, scaling under the 135-pound limit, with a light heavy, under the 175-pound top, because the good light heavy should possess almost the same speed and co-ordination as the good lightweight. And the 40-pound pull in the weights would give the light heavy a terrific punching advantage. It would be genuinely dangerous for the good little man to meet the good big man. And if many such matches were made, the ring would have many fatalities resulting from brain concussion or internal injuries.

* * * *

However, pugilistic history shows us that a good heavyweight of normal poundage—anywhere from 185 to 210—usually is a better fighter than huge men scaling over 225 pounds. Almost invariably when a boxer weighs more than 225 pounds, he loses the speed and co-ordination possessed by the normal heavy.

* * * *

Hence we see a chap like Jack Dempsey, who scaled only about 183 at Toledo, almost murdering huge Jess Willard, and normal-weighted heavies like Maxie Baer, Joe Louis and Leroy Haynes beating "Man Mountain" Primo Carnera into unconsciousness, and a 190-pounder like Walter Neusal, a mediocre fighter, chasing big Ray Impellettiere about the ring for 10 rounds.

* * * *

No—I do not believe we need a ninth division to protect normal heavies from giants. Nature takes care of that. The law of compensation works out, and usually at the expense of the pachyderms.

Briarley A. Wins, 29-21

Bobby Chichester, a former Washington-Lee High star, returned to his old haunts last night in a Briarley Military Academy uniform and was the main reason why the Briarley team upset the Ballston five, 29 to 21, in the losers' gymnasium.

The Briarley lads, with the three Lodge brothers, in principal roles, led, 13 to 10, at half time and were clinging to a slim 20-to-8 margin in the final period when Chichester went on an eight-point scoring spree that clinched the game.

By Bob Garrison.

A swollen thumb was all that stood between Matchmaker Howard Livingston and his scheduling of the delayed Vittorio Venturi-Andre Jessurun fight, last night, for Friday, January 14.

That ailment on the solid right hand of Venturi kept Louis Soresi, Venturi's manager, from agreeing to the bout until X-rays could determine if his fighter had suffered a bone fracture in his fight with Frankie Blair Wednesday.

Meanwhile Andre Jessurun, through his handler, Mike Burke, notified Livingston by phone that he was willing, even anxious, to close for the fight.

Soresi wired Livingston last night that the physician who made the examination said recovery would be indefinite, so immediately the Ninth street showman sent feelers to several other welterweights.

Originally scheduled to meet tonight at the Rialto Fight Club, both fighters automatically forfeited their right to fight in the District this week by engaging in New York bouts less than six days previous to their Washington fight.

Realizing the importance of getting the fight over with, Burke contacted Livingston early yesterday morning and informed the former Miami promoter that he would meet Venturi or any other selected opponent here January 14. When Soresi was first questioned for his consent he implied that he was willing should his fighter's injury prove slight.

In the event Soresi confirms the bout by signing for Venturi, it will be closed and sanction by the District Commission. Although the local body has already asked the National Boxing Association to suspend both fighters and their managers, it is believed that request would be retracted if the bout is scheduled—and held—on the fourteenth.

Stock of both fighters leaped immensely, even though they flirted with a National Boxing Association suspension. Jessurun defeated Frankie Cinque in easy style Tuesday night in the New York Coliseum and Venturi gave Frankie Blair a trimming in the Hippodrome Wednesday. Blair and Cinque, losers in the New York fights, had been principals on the proposed Rialto card, which was canceled before the Christmas holidays.

Clarke Heads Aces Seeking National Honors.

A small but select Washington delegation, including defending champion Astor Clarke, will entrain for Waterbury, Conn., and the eighth annual United States duckpin sweepstakes, scheduled Saturday at the Mattatuck alleys, for prize money that may total $3,000.

The expected entry list of 75 players may roll for the largest prize money in the history of the sport, with $1,000, going to the high man at the end of 15 games.

The local entries, expected to number ten, include, besides Clarke, Hokie Smith, who finished third last year, worth $250; Ed Blakeney, who tied for fourth, and Bill Krauss, Joe Harrison, Gene Hargett, Howard Parsons, Ollie Pacini, Perc Wolfe and Jerry Cowden, all among the 15 top bowlers in the city.

One of the main threats for the crown is Nick Tronsky, Willimantic, Conn., former top bowler in the country, who trailed Clarke by a single pin last year. The ace bowlers from New York to Florida are expected to compete for the rich prize.

Clarke is the only man to win the event more than once and on the basis of form shown here this season the Clarendon ace is hot after a third triumph.

Wheat Whirls Upward to New Season's Peak

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 6.—Rushing up to above previous peak prices this season both at Winnipeg and Chicago, wheat prices skyrocketed 5 cents in Canada and 3¼ cents here.

The record-breaking soaring of values accompanied reports that Canada may be forced to import United States wheat in quantity owing to scantiness of available supplies. Accelerating the upward flight of prices was automatic execution of many stop-loss purchase orders from traders unable or unwilling to put up additional founds to protect commission house requirements. Winnipeg dispatches emphasized that remaining supplies of wheat in Canada were extremely limited.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 2 cents to 3 cents above yesterday's finish, May, 96¼@96⅜; July, 89⅞@90; September, 88⅝; corn, ¼ off to ⅜ up; May, 62⅛@62¼; July, 61¾@61⅞; oats, ⅜@¾ advanced; rye showing 2 cents bulge, and provisions 5 to 17 cents dearer.

G. A. Tomlinson Named Head of Alleghany Corp.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Jan. 6.—Robert R. Young, chairman of Alleghany Corporation announced tonight the election of George A. Tomlinson, of Cleveland, as president of the corporation, succeeding Charles L. Bradley.

Tomlinson, Great Lakes ship operator was associated with George A. Ball, Muncie, Ind., capitalist, in the purchase of Alleghany Corporation control from a Wall Street banking group at a foreclosure sale in New York two years ago.

Young also announced the election to the Alleghany Corporation Board of Tomlinson, Herbert Fitzpatrick, and Robert McKinney. Frank F. Kolby, who was associated with Young in the latter's acquisition of Alleghany Corporation from Ball and his associates, retired from the board.

Tomlinson's entrance as an officer, it was said, does not affect Young's interest, or those of Allan P. Kirby, his associate in control of the Alleghany Corporation.

Executive Committee Formed.

These changes in the management were announced following a meeting of the Alleghany Corporation board.

Creation of an executive committee for the holding company also was disclosed. Tomlinson was elected as its chairman. Other members are Young, Herbert R. Neff, Col. Leonard P. Ayres and Kirby.

Darwin S. Barrett, treasurer, was elected secretary; J. K. Enslow, assistant treasurer, was appointed assistant secretary, and Robert McKinney was named assistant secretary.

Alleghany Corporation is a holding company, in which is vested control of the vast $3,000,000,000 rail empire put together by the late Van Sweringen brothers. Alleghany now is controlled by Young and Kirby.

Roads in which Alleghany has a dominant interest include Chesapeake & Ohio, Nickel Plate, Erie, Pere Marquette, Missouri Pacific and Chicago & Eastern Illinois.

A statement read by Col. Ayres said, in part:

"Mr. Young will remain as chairman of the board and in active charge of financial affairs of the company.

"This move is in line with the interests that Mr. Tomlinson has taken or expects to take in the affairs of the Alleghany Co. and its affiliated companies in association with Mr. Kirby and Mr. Young.

"It will be remembered that Mr. Tomlinson and Mr. Ball came to the assistance of the Van Sweringens in 1935. Mr. Tomlinson subsequently stated that he did not care to make a profit and sold out to Mr. Ball at cost.

"Mr. Ball sold to Mr. Young and his associates for $6,400,000, of which $4,000,000 was paid in cash, and the balance a note to Mr. Ball or the Ball Foundation running for two years."

Brokers' Loans Drop $45,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $674,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented a decrease of $45,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

The Market

Stocks Move Higher Briskly in Last Hour; U. S. Bonds Advance.

New York, Jan. 6.—In a stock market which again did better than a million shares a forward movement was carried out with only minor interruptions, with gains of 1 to 3 points freely spread over the list. United States bonds were firm. May wheat advanced 2⅞ cents a bushel to 96¼.

In the securities markets attention was keen in the stocks and bonds of railroads about which questions of aid from the RFC have been raised. The overnight announcement that the RFC would give the Baltimore & Ohio a loan brought a sharp rebound from the heavy decline yesterday in the securities of that road. Even the Erie improved on the rumor that, after all, the RFC might grant a loan to the road without a Chesapeake & Ohio guaranty, which would enable interest payments on the bond issues that a few days ago passed the interest date. The current crop of railroad rumors includes a number of roads that are in no need of RFC help nor are facing important maturities, but when the winds start they blow everything along.

Softening the Tone.

It seems to be turning out that the bleak prospect of trouble for the country's transportation system is one thing, when it takes concrete form in heavy declines in the bonds, thereby weakening the investments of insurance companies, banks and others that represent the country's savings, and is another when it is simply a matter of bureaucratic ritual. The tough stand taken by Chairman Jones, of the RFC, while perhaps justifiable enough if saving the Treasury from loss is the standard, will have to be abandoned if the real object of the RFC is to be preserved, namely, to tide business over the rough spots—in this case thrown up by Government policies.

Just as the Administration is backing away, for the time being, at least, from some of its social reform schemes, so will the RFC grow more lenient as real trouble approaches. After all the money which the RFC is lending the railroads is largely contributed by taxpayers who are well represented among the investors in railroad securities.

Metal Shares Rise.

Metal and chemical shares made the most substantial gains, particularly the coppers which were influenced not only by reports of a stiffer market for the metal abroad but also by the purchase of a substantial supply of copper by the Government. Anaconda, Kennecott, Amreican Smelting and United States Smelting were in strong demand. Allied Chemical and duPont gained more than 3 points.

Rails recovered a large part of yesterday's losses, with both classes of Baltimore & Ohio registering gains of more than a point. Otis had the best buying support that has been seen in a long time. United States Rubber with a gain of about 2 points, led the rubber group into higher bround. United States Steel and Bethlehem headed the upward movement in their industry, while General Motors and Chrysler were the favorites among motors.

While both the President and his Secretary of the Treasury are showing an unfortunate tendency to move in mental circles, to hesitate and to sail off on the wrong tack in the matter of the budget, genuine concern in the business world is growing. What business is afraid of is not so much whether individuals will have to pay higher taxes to support the Government's relief program so much as it is whether the tax on business in general will stifle enterprise and thereby make it quite impossible for the Government to sustain by taxation a "normal" budget, as the President suggests, of seven billions.

Deficits Ahead.

Some pertinent remarks on the subject were made today by the country's best known tax authority, George O. May, in an address to the State Chamber of Commerce this afternoon. Mr. May notes the lamentable failure of the President to suggest such an obvious procedure as reduction in expenditure below a figure which it has been possible for taxes to meet only in the most optimistic of estimates. The Treasury hasn't actually collected that much money. "So long as Government expenditures are maintained at such a level," says Mr. May, "I see no prospect ahead of us except increasing deficits or new taxation, which will necessarily fall mainly on the persons in the lower income classes."

Mr. May is optimistic to think that Congress "seems to be awakening to the situation and contemplating amendments." He suggests repeal of the undistributed profits tax, restoration of the right to offset losses of one year against profits of succeeding years, and a revision of the capital gains tax to distinguish between true capital gains and income. Failure to change these laws, Mr. May thinks, as do virtually all other students of the problem outside the Government employ, impairs the revenue and the welfare of the people at large.

Time Runs Along.

Assuming prompt action, Mr. May thinks that hopes of industrial advance which would restore prosperity should not be built too high. "Time has been running against us," he observes, "and even complete repeal of the undistributed profits tax could not be expected to repair the damage done to the course of recovery by its enactment. In other fields also the outlook is less hopeful, and we seem to face the discouraging prospect that we may fail to take advantage of our opportunities through lack of the co-operation, good will and resulting confidence that are necessary for their realization."

Inflation. That will help to save the face of the New Deal political spellbinders for a while, even if it will give the public another terrific economic jolt and reduce the standard of living in this country for a long time to come.

Cotton Climbs To New Highs

New York, Jan. 6 (AP).—Following early hesitancy, cotton advanced to future new high levels. March rallied from 8.39 to 8.49 and closed at 8.48, with final prices 8 to 10 points higher. Early offerings were taken by trade buying. Local and New Orleans demands were attracted by firmness of stocks and when offerings proved to be light other buying appeared through commission houses.

Loan Funds Up $110,000,000

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board said last evening that the lendable excess reserves of the Nation's banks increased further last week because of the return flow of money from the pockets of shoppers to the banks.

Excess reserves increased in the week ended January 5 by $110,000,000 to $1,270,000,000. Money in circulation declined $61,000,000 to $6,510,000,000. Another factor in the increased reserves was the withdrawal of Treasury deposits from the Federal Reserve.

The board made no changes in its holdings of Government securities during the week. Inactive gold included in the gold stock and in Treasury cash amounted to $1,223,000,000 on January 5, a decrease of $5,000,000 for the week.

Lieut. Col. Henry H. Malven, jr., 53, adjutant general's department, United States Army, who has been on duty as a war plans officer in the office of the adjutant general for the last two years, died Wednesday at Walter Reed Hospital.

A native of Port Jervis, N. Y., he graduated from West Point in 1909 and was commissioned second lieutenant in the Coast Artillery Corps.

Both Government, Business Bungled, C.I.O. Head Claims

Tucson, Ariz., Jan. 6 (AP).—Those who have managed business and the Federal Government "have not done too good a job of it," John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, said today and added "perhaps it is time something else is tried."

"Believe me, democracy is on trial in this country, as it is over the whole world," he said in an interview. "I cannot say what may happen, but I do know that some people have found they could live happily, successfully, in a communal form in which the whole and not just a few were given consideration."

Hazen Pledges Council Action On Auto Deaths

To Ask More Officers or Legislation if Advised of Need.

One additional policeman for each 1937 traffic death will be asked of Congress by District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen if the Traffic Advisory Council finds more enforcement personnel to be the answer to the city's auto fatality problem, Hazen said yesterday.

Hazen promised definite action by the council to stop the loss of lives in traffic which last year mounted to 106.

"If the council advises me that we need more policemen, I'll take their recommendation right to Congress," Hazen said. "And if they advise me that we need more stringent legislation, we'll make laws."

Triple Study Asked.

The council was asked to study traffic from three viewpoints:

1. Engineering—Widening of streets, underpasses, lights, etc.

2. A study of traffic accidents by the engineering department.

3. Enforcement—Both by police and in the traffic courts.

At ceremonies in his office yesterday, Maj. Brown presented awards to winners of The Washington Post-Metropolitan Police traffic suggestion contest. John C. Hoyt, hydraulic engineer, Department of Interior, and E. H. Michaelis, 1262 Twenty-first street northwest, who submitted outstanding proposals, received checks totaling $25 and special police department courtesy cards.

"We greatly appreciate your constructive and helpful suggestions," Maj. Brown told the winners. "Your proposals showed careful thought. We are doing all within our power to correct traffic evils and your contributions will serve to aid us."

Van Duzer Offers Plan.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer outlined a traffic control program which he said would materially reduce accidents and downtown congestion. His proposals were:

1. Restrict parking within 50 feet of all intersections.

2. Establish a system of pedestrian control.

3. Reduce the number of taxicabs.

4. Stagger the hours of an additional 15,000 Government employes.

Washington, said Van Duzer, has more taxes per capital than any other city in the country. He urged a reduction either through action by the Public Utilities Commission or enactment of compulsory insurance laws.

Recalling that 76 pedestrians were killed in traffic last year, Van Duzer called for strict pedestrian regulations, predicting that fatalities would be reduced by 25 per cent.

Youth Gets 60 Days.

Seventeen-year-old Charles Arnold yesterday was sentenced to 60 days in jail on a charge of reckless driving by Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran.

According to Officer Nelson Skogland, Arnold drove through a red light and skidded four times on car tracks near Eleventh and East Capitol streets.

The traffic director also made public a chart of all accidents in the District last year. Only one precinct, No. 5, covering Southeast Washington west of the Anacostia River, showed a decrease in both fatalities and the total for all accidents.

Lighting Cost Shift Opposed.

The Keystone Automobile Club yesterday launched a new attack on recommendatoins of the Budget Bureau to charge 1939 lighting costs against the special highway fund.

Pointing out that recently introduced legislation contains a provision to permit the District to share in Federal-aid fund, George E. Keneipp, manager of the club, said:

It appears virtually certain that street lighting would be construed as a diversion of motor vehicle tax funds as defined in the proposed act. . . .

"To give the District the benefit of Federal aid in its highway program and to prevent the steady hacking away of the special highway fund for numerous unrelated projects, the Budget Bureau recommendation should be rejected."

Brown Will Ask Curb On Car Horn Blowing

A ban on automobile horn blowing except in cases of emergency will be asked of the District Commissioners by Police Superintendent Maj. Ernest W. Brown, it was learned last night.

Brown said unnecessary horn blowing constituted a traffic accident cause. He said he would urge adoption of the prohibition on a month's trial basis. Warning motorists to use their brakes instead of their horns, he said:

"Numerous drivers drive every day of the year without blowing their horns. Only the impatient and reckless motorist insists upon tooting his horn at the slightest provocation. Unnecessary horn blowing distracts motorists and tends to increase accident hazards."

65,000 Go Hungry As Ohio Struggles With Relief Snarl

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Jan. 6.—A snarl in Ohio relief financing brought hunger and privation tonight to 65,000 persons in the nation's sixth city.

"Some are completely out of food and are going hungry," said Clark L. Mock, the city's acting charity and relief commissioner, who made the estimate of the number of needy.

"Others have been able to get a little credit from grocers on the prospect of relief money becoming available. Others are getting along only on bread."

Meanwhile, the legislature completed action on a measure which within a few days may start food orders flowing again to Cleveland's needy. The city, however, must find money to match State funds. Other Ohio cities reported their situations less serious.

They Plead for Food.

Tearful adults, some with babies in arms sat in Cleveland's six relief offices, pleading for food. In one office, bread and coffee were served twice a day. Police dug into their own pockets to provide for some families.

Four Dictionaries Back Roosevelt

By the Associated Press.

Francis de Sales Ryan, Treasury Building superintendent, produced four dictionaries today to defend President Roosevelt's English from college professors.

Several grammar experts said the expression "consensus of opinion" in yesterday's budget message was redundant because the word "consensus" alone carries the full meaning of the phrase and the words "of opinion" are superfluous. Ryan, however, said the President's expression is supported by the Oxford, Webster, New Standard, and Century dictionaries.

U. S. Moves to End Tie-up in Seattle

Seattle, Jan. 6 (AP).—The Labor Department today moved to end Seattle's port tie-up, with Ernest P. Marsh, conciliator, seeking to break the deadlock between waterfront employers and the Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

On instruction from Labor Secretary Perkins, Marsh arranged hearings with the I. L. W. U. executive committee and the Waterfront Employers Association.

The threat of severe losses to the port through the diversion of cargoes to other ports was voiced by M. G. Ringenberg, manager of the waterfront employers. Seven ships were idle.

Reserve Banks' Income Up.

By the Associated Press.

The 12 Federal Reserve Banks increased their earnings from $8,512,433 in 1936 to $10,801,000 in 1937.

Hardwicke Sips Lemonade at Circus in Zoo

Dr. Mann Presides Over Function for Head of British Fans.

Sawdust, tanbark and pink lemonade held sway at the zoo yesterday as Dr. William M. Mann and the Circus Fans Association of America played host to Sir Cedric Hardwicke, British actor, at a luncheon in (of all places) the reptile house.

Sir Cedric, in addition to being one of England's leading actors, is president of the Circus Fans Association of Great Britain. It was the first time the two organizations—pledged to the preservation of circus traditions—have met jointly.

All the hullabaloo of "big top" shows greeted Sir Cedric and invited guests when they entered the "mess tent"—a second-floor room of the reptile house.

There was a phonograph blaring forth circus music and a "barker" stood behind a big bowl of pink lemonade shouting:

"Peanuts, popcorn, candy—get it here before the big show!"

Everyone joined the fun and drank their fill before the luncheon call was sounded. The room literally reeked with circus atmosphere. Sawdust covered the floor and from the walls hung posters of the Ringling Brothers & Barnum and Bailey Circus.

Under the "big top" there is a ritual observed each Fourth of July. They call it "lowering the canvas"—the partition between mess tents of the performers and hired help is lowered and everyone eats together.

Yesterday, Dr. Mann "lowered the canvas" and members of the press—as "hired help"—joined the invited guests in luncheon. The menu included hot dogs, hamburgers and baked ham with mashed potatoes and baked beans.

Prince and Fiancee Cheered by 200,000

Athens, Jan. 6 (U.P.).—More than 200,000 persons, many of whom had waited six hours in biting cold weather, cheered the arrival in Athens tonight of Princess Frederica Luise, granddaughter of the former Kaiser Wilhelm II, and Crown Prince Paul of Greece who will be married Sunday.

The special train bringing the princess and her parents from Austria was six hours late, held up by heavy snows and storms in central Europe that also delayed the arrival of several royal guests coming for one of the most brilliant weddings in years.

Ford Motor Output Increased Last Year

Detroit, Jan. 6 (AP).—The Ford Motor Co. announced today its 1937 world production totaled 1,314,369 units, of which 1,027,701 were produced and assembled in the United States.

The company's world production in 1936 was 1,194,800 cars and trucks, including 1,079,591 in the United States.

Paraguay Cuts Hours.

Asuncion, Paraguay, Jan. 6 (AP).—President Felix Paiva today signed a decree establishing a maximum eight-hour day and 48-hour week for all workers.

Telephone Gains.

New York, Jan. 6 (AP).—Telephones in service in the principal telephone subsidiaries of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. included in the Bell System increased by 41,700 in December, compared with a gain of 91,500 in December, 1936, the company reported today.

Bob Burns Says—

I don't know whether the Hollywood picture actors have improved in the last few years or if I'm jest beginnin' to get acquainted with 'em, but anyhow my estimation of 'em sure has raised. I use 'ta think the picture actors were a pretty soft lot but, I want 'ta tell you, I never saw so many athletes in my life. Among 'em you find the best from every line of sport.

I don't believe sporting blood is admired anywhere in the world more than it is out here. One day Grandpa Snazzy was crossin' Hollywood boulevard and one of them picture actors run over him with his car. Grandpa go up and told the fella that he wasn't hurt a bit and the fella says "well, now, you certainly are nice about it—it's a real pleasure to knock down a thorough sportsman like you."

'Appeasement' Plan Offered in London Talks

Van Zeeland Brings Britain Scheme for Financial Aid to Reich, Italy.

By the United Press

London, Jan. 6.—Former Premier Paul van Zeeland, of Belgium, arrived in London tonight to confer with Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain on a broad program of world economic appeasement, including financial aid to Germany and Italy, to reduce the threat of war.

Van Zeeland's plan, drafted after months of inquiry that took him to Washington and other capitals, was understood to have two major proposals:

1. Creation of an international gold reserve fund at Basle, Switzerland, to which the United States, Britain, France, Germany and Italy would contribute for world stabilization of currencies.

2. A general arms limitation pact.

Inclusion of arms limitation was believed to have been decided upon to overcome the opposition of certain sections of British public opinion to granting financial help to Europe's dictators without receiving political guarantees.

If an international gold reserve fund is established, the British insist, there must be strong pledges from Fuehrer Adolf Hitler and Premier Benito Mussolini that the funds will not be poured into heavier armaments for Italy and Germany.

The gold reserve, it was pointed out by supporters of Van Zeeland's study, would provide facilities to break the world's "trade jam" and would go far toward appeasing the demands of the "have not" powers. Details of the plan were not disclosed.

Rumanian Shift To Fascists Irks London and Paris

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 6.—Rumania's fluctuating foreign policy, under the new regime of Premier Octavian Goga, tonight aroused growing fears in Paris and London that France's eastern European ally was leaning toward Germany and Italy.

France especially was worried about the effect of this trend toward the Rome-Berlin axis on her old alliance with Rumania, which forms a strong link in her chain of defensive arrangements in eastern Europe.

Yugoslavia, Rumania's eastern neighbor and another French ally, also has shown more friendliness for Italy than France likes. Shortly after the Goga cabinet took office, France was reported to have halted arms shipments to Yugoslavia and Rumania.

London and Paris, however, hoped Rumania's apparent flirting with Premier Mussolini and Chancellor Hitler was only temporary. Some sources expressed the belief the need for money might drive Rumania back into the Anglo-French camp.

Trend Interests United States.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Hull said yesterday this country was watching with deep interest developments in Rumania, where the new government of Premier Goga recently proclaimed anti-Jewish restrictions.

He was asked at his press conference if the American government would follow the lead of Britain and France in making diplomatic representations to Rumania over treatment of Jews. Hull replied the United States was not unmindful of the treatment of Rumanian minorities.

Pair Exonerated In 'Pirate' Killing

Los Angeles, Jan. 6 (U.P.).—The Federal grand jury late today exonerated Robert Horne and George Spernack, the young deck hands who threw overboard an amateur pirate, Jack Morgan, after he had killed the skipper of the schooner-yacht Aafje and for four days ruled the boat with a mailed fist.

Jury Convicts Carpenter of Perjury Count

Deliberating less than an hour a jury in District Court yesterday convicted William R. (Country) Carpenter of perjury in connection with his testimony in the gangland shooting of Joseph E. O'Brien in July, 1936.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins immediately ordered the taciturn Carpenter committed to the District Jail to await sentence next week.

Carpenter is the second of three witnesses found guilty of perjury in the O'Brien case. Previously, Harry (Spike) Behrle was convicted. The third, Joseph E. O'Brien, victim of the incident, is awaiting trial, he too having allegedly forgotten too many important details of how and why he was shot when he was called as a Government witness against Charles (Rags) Warring and five of the latter's henchmen, who are serving prison terms for the shooting.

As pieced together by Roger Robb, youthful Assistant United States Attorney, O'Brien and Carpenter were standing along the curb of the 200 block of Second street southeast when two cars loaded with men drove up. After brief preliminaries, O'Brien was felled by bullets, but Carpenter escaped by running through a nearby lunchroom.

The trio is said to have given statements to the police shortly after the affair, but when they were called upon to testify against the men they allegedly named, they denied many of their statements.

Robb maintained the shooting grew out of the hi-jacking of an automobile load of liquor which the "Rags" Warring group attributed to O'Brien. Ire aroused over the alleged incident led to the shooting, the prosecutor charged.

Both Sides Attack But Teruel Front Stays Unchanged

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Jan. 6.—The insurgent and government armies attacked simultaneously today in the Teruel sector, but the main outline of the 15-mile front remained unchanged.

Fresh troops were moved up and additional guns hauled by tractors along snow-filled roads into firing positions.

The renewed offensive the insurgents began two days ago apparently had made little, if any, progress against the reinforced government lines.

The insurgents pounded two points, Celadas, north of Teruel, and the Villastar sector to the south, trying to force two spearheads toward the important provincial capital.

Lindbergh Hoaxer Is Denied Pardon

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 16 (AP).—The court of pardons refused today to wipe out a conviction against John Hughes Curtis, Norfolk, Va., boat builder found guilty of obstructing justice in the hunt for the kidnaped Lindbergh baby.
